Brace for oil crunch: Ottawa

SASKATOON (CP) — Canadians must brace themselves for fundamental changes in energy matters, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn said Thursday.

The minister also said petroleum products will be in tight supply this fall and winter, but added:

"I am confident that we will see our way though this difficult period although the margin for safety is not great."

He also emphasized that the various regions of Canada must be willing to share the cost and benefits of energy issues.

Current Canadian prices, about $10 a barrel below world prices, do not encourage Canadians to conserve energy, he warned at a conference in Saskatoon.

"Obviously, some more appropriate area than the $2-increase-a-year is necessary," the minister said, referring to the current schedule to increase domestic oil prices $1 a barrel at six-month intervals.

"However, any increase must be accompanied by offsetting actions to deal with a number of related economic impacts, particularly in the non oil-producing provinces and to help low-income Canadians."

The minister, who only the previous day held talks on energy issues with cabinet colleges in Jasper, Alta., was vague on who would receive the price increases.

"The federal government has an obligation to enourage sharing while at the same time permitting those provinces which have titles to resources to benefit fully.

"I strongly endorse the ownership rights over resources of the producing provinces.

"But the federal government must deal with the macro-economic and regional problems caused by increases in oil prices."

There are nine principles on which federal energy polices should be based: Energy self-sufficiency by 1990 with increased Canadian ownership; prices that reflect true replacement costs; resolving problems fairly for all Canadians; increased support for conservation; substitution of abundant energy resources for scarce ones; an energy policy that supports economic growth in Canada; greater security of supply, particularly for Quebec and the Atlantic provinces; encouragement of research and development for new enegry sources; and safe and environmentally accepable energy production.

The minister warned that Canada must move faster to develop domestic oil sources. Last year, Canada had an oil-trade deficit of $1.4 billion.

He said that in 1978 Canadians spent $22 billion on energy, 10 per cent of the gross national product.

Another problem was that foreign-owned oil companies benefit more from present tax incentives then smaller Canadians firms.

"We will be taking steps to increase the opportunities for Canadians in the energy sector."

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark sets out tonight in search of a Canadian oil price increase formula acceptable to both producer Alberta and the consuming provinces, notably Ontario.

The prime minister announced Thursday that he will meet Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed in Calgary tonight and Premier William Davis of Ontario either in Toronto or Ottawa next Tuesday.

His talks in Calgary will be private and the Soviet troop protest by U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The United States charged today a brigade of some 3,000 Russian troops is now stationed in Cuba and said it has expressed strong concern to the Soviet Union about the buildup only 145 kilometres from Florida.

The increase of Soviet military strength to an estimated 5,000 uniformed troops on the island was detected by air reconnissance and other intelligence methods, said State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III.

"We are concerned about the presence of Soviet combat troops in Cuba," he said. "As President Carter recently stated, it is our policy to oppose the presence of Soviet combat forces in this hemisphere."

He said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance raised the issue Wednesday with Soviet officials in Washington, but has received no reply.

Carter would not speculate on Soviet motives for the troops increase, nor would he lay out any possibilities of U.S. action.

In addition to the approximately 5,000 troops now stationed in Cuba, there are 6,000 to 8,000 Russian civilian advisers on the island, Carter said.

But the brigade is the first Soviet combat unit detected on the island. Carter said U.S. intelligence detected elements of the unit as far back as 1976 but could not confirm presence of the full unit until recently.

It is the U.S. fear that the Soviet troops could form the training nucleus for a series

Mainland pickets disrupt service on E&N

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Union pickets from the Lower Mainland this morning wrecked the travel plans of more than 50 persons who planned to ride the Esquimalt and Nanaimo railway Dayliner to Courtenay.

The one-day picket line was set up by Burnaby members of Lodge 58 of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of Canada at the E&N station in Esquimalt around 7:30 a.m., three-quarters of a hour before the Dayliner was scheduled to leave on its Up-Island run.

E&N railway workers refused to cross the line even though the pickets claimed their intention was not to picket the railway but rather to announce a special union meeting later today in Burnaby.

Four union members appeared — two at the roundhouse and two at the station — with placards that read the meeting was being called to discuss Mediator Mr. Justice J. G. Gould's report on a new union contract with carmen employed by Canadian Pacific Railway in B.C.

Union member Ron Wiksyk said the carmen are not happy with the settlement which was agreed to by all other craft unions in May.

He said the carmen feel that because they have completed a five-year apprenticeship and are tradesmen, unlike the other crafts, they should get more pay than the contract provides.

But Gould, in his report, upheld the contract and denied the carmen's request.

"It's not a picket line," he said. "It's an information line. If the trainmen want to interpret it as a picket that's their business. But we aren't picketing the railway."

That was of little comfort, however, to the crowd of people — senior citizens, women with children, tourists and visitors from as far away as Great Britain — who had gathered on the platform this morning to take the ride to Courtenay.

"It's the ruination of a long-planned day," said Dirk Post who came over from Vancouver with his father to ride the line.

"How can they (the trainmen) do this?" he said. "It's not legal to disrupt service."

Libby Delahunt was another left standing on the platform with her two sons, Zachary, 7, and Adam, 18 months.

She had promised Zachary a train ride to Parksville before school starts. Now, she said, she'll have to make alternate arrangements.

The unexpected cancellation was a big disappointment also to Mike Lloyd.

Lloyd, a producer with BBC television in London, is on a trip through B.C. gathering research for a documentary on the province.

"I was told to ride the line as it is supposed to be particularly scenic," he said.

"The railway even gave me special authorization to make the trip," he added.

Seized boats total now 18

The seizures of the Cecilia B of Monterey, Calif., and the Miss Bright of Astoria, Ore., brings the total number of American boats arrested to 18.

The U.S. government does not recognize jurisdiction over highly migratory fish, such as tuna, beyond an 18-kilometre limit. Canada claims jurisdiction over all species within its 320-kilometre territorial limit.

The Canadian Forces destroyer-escort Mackenzie assisted federal fisheries protection officers Thursday in the seizure of six other boats near the southern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Two American boats seized late Wednesday are being escorted to Victoria by the fisheries protection vessel Laurier and are expected to arrive here tonight.

The six ships seized Thursday are sailing for Victoria accompanied by the FPV Tanu, which effected the first seizures Sunday. They will arrive here late Sunday or Monday.

The skippers of the first eight boats seized appeared in court in Victoria Tuesday. They pleaded not guilty to charges of illegally entering and fishing in Canadian

Operators out: flights delayed

Radio operators walked off the job at some airports across Canada today on 24 hour study sessions and were working to rule at others, causing flight delays but no major problems.

Designated employees are supposed to maintain safe procedures during a strike. There are 212 radio operators in B.C. Of those, 101 are designated.

A radio room operator at the Vancouver International Airport said this morning that the strike is in effect and that there is only minimal staff on duty.

On Vancouver Island, airports affected are Campbell River, Port Hardy, Nanaimo and Comox.

The radio operators, without a contract since July, 1978, and in a legal strike position since Tuesday, are dissatisfied with a conciliation board recommendation that would give them a $1,250 increase in annual salary on Aug. 1, 1978, and $1,300 more on Aug. 1 this year.

Major blaze in N.W.

The fire started this morning when a log salvage boat moored beside the creosoted pilings of the dock exploded while undergoing repairs.

Police say a man aboard the boat is missing.

At noon the blaze was out of control along 100 yards of the dock's pilings and underside sending a huge pall of black smoke over the city.

"It's incredible. I can't see anything from here," said a city fire department dispatcher.

He said the firefighting force, including firemen brought in from Surrey, Burnaby and Richmond, were concentrating on keeping the fire from spreading.

A Canadian Armed Forces demolition team from Chilliwack was ready to blow up the dock if necessary.

Several tow and tug boats with hastily-rigged fire hoses were assisting firemen.

Tom Grozier, a National Harbor Commission spokesman, said the dock was vacant when the fire broke out and that both warehouses were "fairly empty."

Zoom the way to a new high

By HARRY NELSON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — An herb that is the main ingredient of a Brazilian soft drink has almost overnight become the California drug culture's latest fad.

Marketed as a food under the trade name of Zoom, the pulverized plant seeds stamped into tablets are said by some of its users to have the stimulant punch of cocaine.

Actually, according to pharmacologists and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, Zoom, like the herb from which it is made, has no more punch than a couple of cups of coffee because its chief active ingredient is caffeine.

But all over Los Angeles, the herb and health food stores that sell Zoom say they can't keep it in stock.

Zoom's distributor, Marc Bernstein of Beverly Hills, said that since he first introduced the product several weeks ago, he has been "swamped" with orders.

"We've had days when we sold 3,000 cases (12 bottles to a case)," Bernstein said. The cost of a bottle of 90 tablets (800 miligrams each) at one Los Angeles store is $9.95.

The label on the bottle says Zoom "comes direct from the Amazon jungle to you." It says the product is "100 percent organic" and identifies it as guarana.

Guarana is an Amazonian woody vine that belongs to the soapberry family of plants. In Brazil, where it has been used for centuries by Indians as a stimulant, guarana is the base of a popular carbonated beverage.

"Caffeine is the only active alkaloid in guarana," Dr. Ronald Siegel, a psychopharmacologist in the department of psychiatry at UCLA medical school, said.

Dr. Andrew Weil, an authority on drugs and a consultant to the Harvard Botanical Museum, says some users may be adversely affected by caffeine without knowing it is in the tablets. Among them would be cardiovascular and ulcer patients and insomniacs.

Troops seal Irish border

DUBLIN (AP) — Troops and police in the Irish republic sealed off the border with Northern Ireland today to prevent raids threatened by Protestant terrorists to avenge the assassination of Earl Mountbatten.

Security forces fanned out along the border hunting two Irish Republican Army guerrillas they believe detonated the bomb that blew up Mountbatten's yacht in the republic Monday, official sources said. Irish police earlier rounded up 200 IRA sympathizers in a huge dragnet.

Two men, both said to have long connections with the IRA guerrilla movement, were charged Thursday with murdering the 79-year-old British soldier-statesman off Mullaghmore in County Donegal on Monday.

Prime Minister Jack Lynch's Fianna Fail (Soldiers of Destiny) government here ordered the border sealed after John Taylor, a leading Protestant politician in Northern Ireland, said "loyalist" guerrillas should aim their revenge attacks against the predominantly Roman Catholic republic.

Taylor, a member of the European Parliament who survived an assassination attempt by the Roman Catholic-based IRA eight years ago, urged Protestant hardliners not to take up arms, but declared that if leaders of Protestant paramilitary organizations decide to act, their attacks "should be directed at targets within the Republic of Ireland, from which most of the serious IRA attacks now originate."

Informed sources said three battalions of Irish republic troops, about 1,200 men, and more than 2,000 policemen based on the touchy border will man 24-hour checkpoints at all border crossings for the next few days.

The Dublin government's move reflected growing tensions in both Irelands after the killings Monday of Mountbatten, who was a cousin of Queen Elizabeth; three others on the boat with him, and 18 British soldiers in Northern Ireland. All died from bombs the mainly IRA's militant Provisional wing claimed to have set.

Today's IRA, the latest generation of Irish rebels who have fought British rule for centuries, is trying to force the British out of Northern Ireland and reunite the Protestant-dominated territory with the republic. Ireland was partitioned in 1922.

Protestant militants, who want to remain British, have threatened to resume attacks on IRA men and their Roman Catholic sympathizers because they say the British army has failed to smash the guerrillas.

The two men charged with Mountbatten's assassination, John Joe McGirl and Thomas McMahon, were ordered held in custody until Oct.2 by an anti-terrorist court in Dublin. They were arrested at a police checkpoint several hours before the bomb exploded on Mountbatten's yacht.

Official sources reported that the two are believed to have planted the bomb, then driven away, leaving two other men to detonate it.

Police who arrested more than 100 persons and questioned another 700 in a massive nationwide search for the killers of Lord Mountbatten said today two suspects believed to be the "trigger men" may have fled to England.

Detectives said they hope to question Lord Brabourne, Mountbatten's son-in-law, who was seriously wounded in the bomb blast.

Canada retaliates on air fares

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Transport Commission Thursday ordered the suspension of fall seat sales by American Airlines and Eastern Airlines on flights between Canada and the United States.

The suspensions were ordered just hours after President Carter upheld a U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board ruling blocking similar discount fares offered by Air Canada.

The commission said it regretted taking the action, but had no alternative in light of the U.S. action. It added it would "look favorably" on American or Eastern requests to allow passengers who have already purchased their tickets to fly at discount rates — provided the United States extends the same privileges to Air Canada ticket-holders.

"We'll be appealing to the Civil Aeronautics Board to allow us to honor these tickets," said an Air Canada spokesman. Otherwise, he said, there would be full refunds given to ticket holders.

The U.S. portion of bargain seat tickets applies during the period Oct. 5 to Nov. 23.

Air Canada stopped selling tickets to the U.S. under its own fall seat sale Wednesday in anticipation of the unfavorable Carter decision which was described by one official in Washington as unconditional.

Air Canada estimated it had sold between 35,000 and 55,000 of the special fares to U.S. destinations.

The savings that were promised — subject to government approval — were substantial.

Comparable savings were offered by the two U.S. airlines. It was not immediately known how many passengers had purchased tickets under their discount plans.

Ironically, the main issue is not the fares charged by the airlines involved, but what the industry refers to as fences — conditions passengers have to meet to qualify for savings.

CP Air revises rate hopes

TORONTO (UPC) — CP Air announced today it has filed revised domestic fares with the Canadian Transport Commission for approval of increases of about 2.5 per cent to 4 per cent on regular economy rates effective Oct. 1.

CP Air said the CTC's decision to defer its requested 5 per cent fare increase to April 1 had not permitted it to off-set higher costs for fuel, airport charges and wages.

The Courier Jet service linking Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg and Toronto will be revised to provide a round-trip for the one-way fare plus $11.

waters and were released on $5,000 performance bonds. The eight cases were remanded to Feb. 13.

As controversy mounted over the seizures, the Times acquired a document this week that indicates the U.S. government has actively encouraged U.S. fishermen to risk seizure by fishing for albacore tuna in Canadian waters.

As word of today's seizures was received, an American source close to the talks aimed at resolving the differences said American authorities are distressed.

Officials here are awaiting word from Ottawa on Canada's latest suggestions on how the problem might be resolved.

Sources had said earlier that talks have involved the possibility of giving the Americans access to tuna in Canadian waters in return for undisclosed U.S. concessions.

Wally Johnson, federal fisheries director for the Pacific region, said other boats had been sighted on the grounds and would be picked up today.

7 die in plane crash near Prince Rupert

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A Trans Provincial Airlines plane, going out of its way to make an extra stop, crashed Thursday night, killing seven people and injuring three others.

The injured were flown to Vancouver and admitted to Shaughnessy Hospital early this morning.

The twin-engine amphibian Grumman Goose, on a flight from the isolated mining community of Kitsault, was bound for the Seal Cove seaplane terminal here, but apparently decided to stop first at the Prince Rupert airport on nearby Digby Island.

Airport manager Howard Merth said pilots often stop first at Digby to allow passengers to make connections with other flights. Two passengers were to make a connection with a CP Air flight Thursday, Merth said.

The 10-seat plane, with nine passengers and one pilot aboard, crashed near a British Columbia Hydro right-of-way in isolated bush on the island.

"A boat radioed and said that it saw smoke, so the airport radio operator tried to make contact with the plane," he said. "When he couldn't, he hit the alarm button."

A person who had talked to a helicopter pilot who flew to the scene said the pilot reported that the plane's wings had sheared off and its nose was burned.

Merth and RCMP spokesmen said they did not know if the plane hit a power line. Power was cut in lines through the area, leaving several villages on outlying islands without power until later today.

Merth said the airport has been closed and a ministry of transport investigation was to start today. A CP Air flight, due at Prince Rupert shortly after the crash, was diverted to Terrace, about 200 kilometres to the east.

As a result of the crash, radio operators, who had planned to walk out at midnight decided to stay on the job.

"We consider this an emergency and therefore we are not going to walk out," said one operator who would not give his name.

The plane was believed to be carrying construction workers from a Climax molybdenum mine site at Kitsault, on Alice Arm about 160 kilometres northeast of here.

Merth said Trans Provincial Airlines operates a commuter service between Kitsault and Prince Rupert, with planes running on no regular schedule. It is up to pilots to decide if the plane is to stop first at Digby and they usually radio when they are within eight kilometres of the airport.

He did not say whether the pilot advised radio operators that it was bound for Digby Thursday.

Lone Ranger unmasked!

Clayton Moore with mask intact

In the old days, the Lone Ranger always won over those skeptical lawmen who challenged him to remove his mask if he was really a good guy. Not any longer. A Superior Court judge Thursday ordered the unmasking of Clayton Moore, 64, who has made the Lone Ranger a living and a personal crusade since playing the character on television from 1948 to 1956. At the request of the Wrather Corp., which owns the rights to the fictional western hero, the judge ordered Moore not to appear in public in "a Lone Ranger mask or any mask substantially similar to it." He spared Moore the indignity of unmasking in the courtroom, allowing him to leave in his white hat and mask.

Marie Frieda, better known to her fans as Lulu, is in a Canterbury, England, hospital — the victim of a two-car collision on a rural road Wednesday night. Doctors list her condition as satisfactory. She's best remembered for her hit To Sir With Love — 1960s theme song for the movie of the same name, starring Sidney Poitier.

Greek shipping heiress, Christina Onassis, and her Soviet husband Sergei Kauzov had a set-to with photographers at Heathrow Airport on Thursday, but it was all a misunderstanding. The fracas began after Miss Onassis and her 38-year-old husband arrived in a private jet from the Greek island of Scorpios to board a plane for Los Angeles. They were spotted by photographers on a moving sidewalk taking them toward their plane. An over-enthusiastic Greek bodyguard began to push the photographers back but dropped the couple's passports and tickets. When he stooped to pick them up, Miss Onassis thought he had been hit. "Why did you do that to him?" She shouted. "I was going to cooperate." The couple then dashed for their plane. A few minutes later, an airline attendant told the photographers Miss Onassis had misunderstood what was happening and apologized.

Jane Fonda and Sally Kellerman will do the honors today in Santa Fe, N.M., at an art auction designed to raise funds for "Delancey Street" — a drug rehabilitation program. Miss Fonda's husband, Tom Hayden, also will attend.

Convicted killer Peter Demeter won another round Thursday in the fight to clear his name and to collect almost $2 million in insurance money on his wife, who he is convicted of having killed. Three Ontario Supreme Court judges ruled that Demeter has the right to have his civil suit tried by a jury of six persons. Three insurance companies holding the policies have been trying for almost a year to have the Supreme Court order that the case be tried by judge alone. A judge refused last winter to allow the insurance companies to block Demeter's attempts to have a jury and, although another judge gave the companies the right to appeal, it was rejected Thursday by the Divisional Court.

And finally, Burton Gutterman wants to be a policeman. Trouble is, he's 4-foot-3 tall and weighs just 98 pounds."There's nothing the matter with me," the 25-year-old dwarf says. "I'm just short."Police Personnel Director Michael Gardner said Gutterman's chances of getting a job are poor because Civil Service regulations give minorities and disabled veterans first preference in police hiring. Even if he gets through the initial hassles, Gutterman must still be examined by another police physician before he can be accepted. "I wouldn't be surprised," he grumbled, "if they asked me to leap tall buildings in a single bound."

UFO attack leaves deputy unconscious

WARREN, Minn. (AP) — A brilliantly-lighted object that swept down on a deputy sheriff's car and left the vehicle damaged and the officer unconscious remained a mystery Thursday.

Aside from being shocked and sustaining a mild case of "welder's blindness," Deputy Val Johnson was in good condition Thursday, three days after the incident. It happened early Monday on the flats of the Red River Valley in northwestern Minnesota.

The chief investigator for the Centre for UFO (Unidentified Flying Object) Studies, Allan Hendry, investigated the case and at his Evanston, Ill., headquarters Thursday he said "it is a most incredible case and there are some most unusual clues," including the two bent antennas, shattered windshield; broken head lamp and a small dent in the hood of the patrol car.

"A truly anomalous case," said Hendry. "We receive about 1,000 tips of UFOs a year. We investigate by phone the most interesting ones. But in the event of an unusual case like this, where damage is involved, it's worth going out to see."

Hendry said he is intrigued by the fact there is no damage to the rim of the headlamp. Also, the radio antennas were bent over but there is no evidence of paint marks and the bugs on them had not been scraped off.

And the fact Johnson's wrist watch and the electric clock in the car each stopped for 14 minutes heightened the mystery.

The Federal Aviation Administration and Grank Forks air base had no reports of aircraft in the area at the time of the incident. "But it doesn't prove a plane wasn't there," said Hendry.

Johnson, 35, who apparently was unconscious for about 30 minutes following the incident, has worked at the Marshall County sheriff's office 2½ years. Sheriff Dennis Brekke said in a telephone interview that Johnson is a good worker, stable, with a wife and three children. "People like him real well," Brekke added.

Johnson intended to rest at his home in Oslo, Minn., Thursday but went to meet with reporters at the sheriff's office in Warren.

"I was pretty down in the dumps the first couple of days afterwards," the officer said. "I thought I was in mental difficulty. It's pretty hard for me to justify, since I work with facts and logic.

"But what happened isn't logical, and that's a bit frightening."

U.S. wooing wary Canadians with promise of abundant gas

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. commerce department is launching an advertising campaign in Canada to try to convince wary motorists that gasoline is available for a late summer or fall vacation in the United States.

A department spokesman said Thursday that about $60,000 will be spent during September for ads in daily newspapers in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, encouraging U.S. travel by pointing out that the gasoline station lineups have disappeared.

"We aim to convince Canadians that they can now travel by automobile throughout the United States without undue fears regarding availability of fuel," says Jeanne Westphal, acting assistant commerce secretary.

The U.S. government is concerned that "alarming stories" in Canadian media about the gasoline scarcity and lineups that were common in July is keeping Canadians away from U.S. travel.

The ad campaign will offer free maps, brochures and "gasoline advisories" for motorists to the United States. The advisories offer updated information on supplies, states that still impose odd-even rationing systems based on licence plate number, and prices.

Canadian will note quickly steeply higher prices, which now average more than $1 for a U.S. gallon that is five-sixths the size of a Canadian gallon. Prices are higher along major interstate routes.

Commerce officials acknowledge U.S. tourist industries have been hit financially by slumping auto traffic from Canada — the No. 1 source for international visitors to the United States.

In June, the number of autos entering the United States from Canada slumped 18.2 per cent from a year earlier to 529,185. Generally, the United States receives about 12 million Canadians a year who bring in more than $2 billion in foreign exchange earnings for the U.S. treasury.

But if Canadian auto travel to the United States has slackened, it has not meant a significant improvement for Canada's tourism trade deficit with the United States. Statistics Canada reports Canada's deficit on tourism with the United States was $867 million in the first six months this year, compared with $903 million for 1978.

One answer, U.S. commerce officials give is that more Canadians are coming to the United States by airliner, even if it costs a little more, rather than drive.

Sixth octuplet dies

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — The sixth of eight infants born to a Naples housewife two weeks ago died Thursday and doctors said there was little chance the remaining two baby girls would survive.

Doctors at San Paolo hospital said little Valentina Chianese died of intestinal blockage.

The infant was one of five girls and three boys born to Mrs. Pasqualina Chianese, 29, on Aug. 16. Five of the infants died within three days of delivery.

"If the remaining two survive, it will be a miracle." a hospital spokesman said.

Control the controllers

The reaction of the coach of the New Westminister Bruins hockey team to the comments of provincial court Judge James Shaw unfortunately only adds credence to what the judge had to say about those who control hockey.

Ernie (Punch) McLean told reporters shortly after seven of his players were sentenced that he didn't think the outcome of the case would change his aggressive style of coaching. The coach added that he was worried about the effects the hearing would have on hockey "because the judge's ruling makes a hipcheck a criminal offence."

It's to be hoped that hockey coaches and managers, whether working with tykes or pros, managed to glean more from the judge's words than did McLean.

In handing down the sentences, Judge Shaw clearly thought that the senior partners in the offence had escaped. "The underlying authors of this brawl are not before the court. The entire system of hockey as it exists in North America today, from midget to NHL, the team owners, managers and in particular the coaches must bear a large share of the responsibility. These young men are manipulated — apparently happily — by the owners and coaches to do exactly as they are told."

Since the players themselves are the ones who throw the punches and wield the sticks, they end up the pawns of a system that to date demands a level of intimidation and aggression that in more instances is finding itself in conflict with the law.

The judge hit the nail on the head with his summary of how to reduce the level of violence and increase the quality of play: "It lies in a revision of the attitudes of some owners, managers and coaches at all levels of organized hockey."

If the antics of the seven Bruin players were taken out of the context of a hockey game, they could well have ended up in jail. Instead, because the incident occurred in a hockey arena where the heat and nature of the game become mitigating circumstances, the shame is more severe than the penalty.

While it is questionable whether two months probation and an order restricting league play until Dec. 1 will act as a deterrent to other players, it is clear no permanently effective headway will be made until owners, managers and coaches are forced to share liability for the actions of their players.

Many argue that hockey spectators demand the violence and aggression so prevalent in the system. The vast majority of fans, we believe, want triumph over the Russians, and it's obvious that to accomplish that, more emphasis must be placed on skill.

There is a big difference between a clean hipcheck and assault, in the eyes of both the law and hockey.

Sense of fair play

Nobody should be surprised by what seems to be the Governor of Alaska's sense of fair play when it comes to an international fishing dispute.

Jay Hammond says that he is 100 percent behind the Canadian stand on the tuna controversey. He says he agrees with Canada's position of enforcing its fishing control over the 200-mile limit because Alaska also has a 200-mile limit.

One of the major reasons Canadian halibut fishermen are getting the boot from Alaskan waters is that state government's insistance that Canadians should not fish within their 200-mile limit. Hammond mounted a significant lobby to the U.S. state department to have that sovereignty assured.

If anything, the governor's hard-line stand earlier this year has done much to antagonize Canadian fishermen and politicians, and to precipitate the current tuna dispute.

Despite the underlying current, Hammond's credos are likely welcomed by Canadian officials because of the obvious problems they create for the American negotiators trying to present a united front.

Since Hammond is so willing to recognize our 200-mile limit now, maybe he will be as accommodating when the the negotiators turn their attention from fish to maritime boundary treaties.

The Dixon Entrance boundary which separates B.C. from Alaska has been in dispute since Canada and the United States claimed 200-mile limits. The Americans say the boundary is mid-channel while Canadians claim the boundary that has existed for years, one that lies approximately 12 miles to the north.

It will be interesting to watch Hammond when those talks start.

Winning war on red tape

WASHINGTON — The regulatory reform movement is still very much alive, but it is taking a little forced respite. After a year of highly publicized efforts to improve the performance of regulatory agencies, a dearth of new regulations to use as testing grounds has forced a slowdown.

The regulatory analysis review group, a White House-based body created by President Carter to review about 20 coming regulations per year, currently has no such reviews under way and only a very small number appear likely in the next few months. For the most part, the issuance of major new rules, commonplace a few months ago, has dried up.

Still a mystery

Of the list of several dozen coming major regulations prepared last spring by the review group, only two have appeared, and the group decided after reviewing the formal language of those that there were not enough problems to justify a review. The occupational safety and health administration, once a major source of such proposals, has offered none in recent months, and none are anticipated soon. The environmental protection agency, as well, has been largely silent on major regulations.

"The agencies have not in the last four months or so come out with the blockbuster regulatory proposals we expect every month or so," said one White House staff member.

Why that has happened is something of a mystery. But it may be that regulatory overhaul efforts have finally made their mark and that agencies have at last become sensitive to the impact of a string of multi-billion-dollar strictures.

In the interim, the regulatory watchdogs have turned their attention in other directions. One somewhat new direction is toward economic regulation, such as in the transportation sector, rather than toward social issues, such as the environment, which had previously been the focus of the economists.

The economists cite, for example, a decision earlier this summer to allow free competition among interstate bus companies temporarily during the busy summer season. That type of overhaul, the economists believe, will produce lower fares and better service for travellers.

Another coming focus of the regulatory overhaul team is the department of energy, which, the economists contend, has regularly flouted the procedures set down last fall by the president. In a vast majority of recent cases, the economists say, the energy department has issued regulations on an emergency basis, bypassing a requirement that a regulatory analysis be issued. Without such an analysis, action by the economists becomes difficult.

The economists plan to use the clout of the office of management and budget to press the department of energy to improve its record. As part of that effort, the budget office is expected to provide Congress with an evaluation of how various agencies have complied with the president's requirements of last fall.

The central intelligence agency, frequently the source of controversial reports on energy, has issued a new study of the world oil market in the years ahead in which it contends that without "unprecedented rates of conservation," economic growth in industrialized countries will fall short of goals.

Slow growth

The reason, says the agency, is the prospect of a continuation of the intermittent shortages and sharp price escalations of the last six years.

"The industrial countries somehow will have to adjust to a slow growth of energy supply and a stable or declining oil supply," the agency said. "The adjustment will take the form of increased energy conservation, reduced energy growth or, most likely, some combination of both of these."

In general, the CIA's assumptions are on the bleak side: a decline in United States oil production, a decline in exports from Communist countries, and continued restrictions for political reasons by a variety of foreign oil producers.

The result, according to the CIA, is a world gap in supply over demand in the next three years of two to five million barrels a day, depending upon how much growth the industrialized countries try to achieve.

RICHARD GWYN

It's better to be an oilman

In tones of dismay and disapproval, the Calgary Herald reported recently that Canadian taxpayers "may have paid as much as 93 per cent" of the $150 million supposedly invested by Dome Petroleum last year to search for oil in the Beaufort Sea.

In its textbook example of investigative journalism, the Herald picked its way through dauntingly complex tax loopholes such as the "super-depletion allowance", to show that ordinary taxpayers, without knowing it, are contributing virtually all the "risk" capital being spent in the Beaufort.

The single flaw to the Herald's calculation was that it was too conservative. If only the subsidy were so small. In fact, Canadian taxpayers are paying up to 110 to 120 per cent of the costs of Dome and of the lawyers, doctors, businessmen and similar high income types who, to avoid paying taxes, have thrown their pin money down exploratory frontier wells.

Cost plus premium

This confidential calculation, revealed by a cabinet source here, means, if you bring yourself to believe this, that taxpaying shmucks like you actually are paying the entire cost plus a premium. Once oil is found, with your money, Dome and its investors will keep the entire profit. (By "entire profits" I mean entire profits: as an example, Shell Oil last year so ordered its affairs that it paid not one cent of federal taxes. By "shmuck" I mean shmuck: no government had judged it necessary to tell how your tax money is being used.)

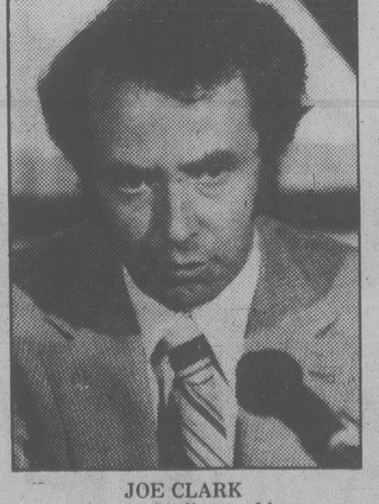
Once your rage at your own gullibility has subsidied, allow your imagination to take off. Picture yourself now as a member of Prime Minister Joe Clark's inner cabinet. You and your colleagues are assembled here to meet in a rather gloomy log cabin, surrounded by spruce trees, chipmunks, Japanese tourists and short-sleeved RCMP officers who sit in the sun reading pocket books by Harold Robbins and Alistair MacLean.

Your job, as a label on your black ring binder tells you, is to consider: "Directions for the Government: A Planning Basis for the Next Year." Among these directions, energy policy is by far and away the most important.

Remember, that, as a Conservative, you have just won an election by denouncing the former Liberal government for creating new bureaucracies like Petro-Canada, and by promising to achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1990 by giving the oil companies additional funds to invest in exploration through a combination of higher oil prices and tax incentives.

However, you have just learned about the tax rip-off on frontier wells, and about how even in non-frontier wells, in Alberta, say, the taxpayer's share of the cost is typically 98 per cent.

You have learned as well, as one cabinet source put it: "a) there's not the slightest evidence the industry needs more money (how could it when taxpayers are providing almost all the exploration funds anyway? and b) there's not the slightest evidence there's any relation between higher oil prices and increases in oil production. (The key relationship is between taxes due and the taxable income from additional oil production.)"



JOE CLARK
. . . energy policy problems

Take those facts, and while still imagining yourself as a member of Clark's inner cabinet, consider now what you should do about your promises to abolish Petro-Canada and to rely instead upon the oil multi-nationals by throwing more money at them. Nothing, is the quick answer.

Instead, you begin to grow up. This, mostly, is what the inner cabinet has done during the first two days of their four days of brainstorming here. So far, they have reached not a single policy decision. Instead, all of them newcomers to office, they have begun, as one minister put it, "to understand what it is we are actually doing."

Example. If you accept that oil prices will do nothing to increase oil supplies (since, through the courtesy of unaware taxpayers, oil companies already have all the exploration funds they need) then why raise oil prices at all? "Sure, higher prices may do nothing to increase oil supplies," said a cabinet source, "but there's abundant evidence they will reduce demand. Thus, as a conservation measure, higher prices are justified to help us achieve self-sufficiency."

True. However, instead of a general oil price increase, which would simply fatten the revenues of the oil companies, why not a specific excise tax applied at the pump? Funds generated by the tax then could be applied to specific, necessary projects — tar sand plants, frontier exploration — through a publicly owned company such as Petro-Canada.

But the Conservatives have promised to abolish Petro-Canada. As well, an excise tax would invade provincial jurisdiction over oil. True, if our oil prices go to world levels, Alberta's Heritage Fund will be $30 billion by 1990. Already, with the fund at a mere $5 billion, Alberta has run out of ideas of how to spend its money. Still, the Conservatives promised a "fresh face on federalism" by getting on with the provinces. In return for allowing Alberta to keep all the money, they hope Alberta will co-operate by recycling more of its windfall revenues into the other provinces.

Tax on profits?

As an alternative to an excise tax, or to higher across-the-board oil prices, then, how about an "excess profits tax" imposed on the oil industry to scoop off part of the extra revenues companies will get once prices are raised? The Conservatives, though, promised to get government off the backs and out of the pockets of private industry. Also, how could Ottawa use this extra oil revenue except to an agency such as Petro-Canada, which of course it has promised to abolish.

Round the rectangular table in their log cabin, and beneath the unblinking gaze of a stuffed Rocky Mountain ram, Clark and his inner ministers have begun to realize what it is they're actually doing, without, yet, and almost certainly to the meeting's end as well, being able to decide what it is they should actually do.

A last test of your imagination. Which, now, would you rather be — a member of Clark's inner cabinet, paralyzed into indecision amid the chipmunks, or a taxpaying shmuck safe at home?

Me, I'd rather be an oilman.

Improve queues

On returning from Vancouver on Aug. 23, I joined a queue of vehicles half way along the Tsawwassen causeway at 2:05 p.m., my intention being to catch the 3 p.m. ferry to Swartz Bay.

From that time until 3:25 p.m. I and many others both in front and behind me played a "stop-go" game until I was at 3:25 p.m. eventually assigned to the fifth lane of passenger vehicles destined (we hoped) for the 4 p.m. ferry. The 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. ferries had arrived and departed during the our crawl along the causeway.

During the period between 2:05 and 3 p.m. a considerable number of buses, trucks and campers passed the causeway queue and on my eventual entry into the terminal compound at 3:25 p.m. I noted that with the exception of three campers all the other vehicles which had bypassed the queue had boarded the 2 p.m. ferry (left 2:45 p.m.) or the 3 p.m. ferry (left 3 p.m.).

Since this was the third time during the past five weeks that I had observed this pattern of embarking commercial vehicles and campers, I asked for an explanation at the terminal control tower and was informed: (a) regular buses have reservations; (b) livestock has full priority; (c) commercial vehicles have priority providing they arrive 30 minutes before sailing time.

The first two policies I find entirely acceptable. The third I find questionable since I too use the ferries in the course of my employment and could easily arrive two hours before a truck only to see it board before me, and, as was happening on Aug. 23, arrive after the 30-minute deadline and still board. Naturally the controller in the tower insisted that vehicles did not pass the queue on the causeway but many scores of drivers and passengers would insist otherwise as I do.

I would appreciate some assurance that the established policy will be adhered to and indeed that the 30 minutes latitude allowed commercial vehicles be reviewed as it related to private/passenger vehicles.

I would also like to propose that some relief be afforded the passengers of private vehicles from the uncomfortable conditions that prevail during the "causeway crawl" lasting anything up to two hours. As a possible solution I would suggest that the parking compound be more fully utilized by accepting the vehicles earlier and quicker and then allowing the passengers to wait in one place with the refreshment area available. This I am sure would be of considerable help to persons with young children and to the elderly, especially during the hot weather. — A. J. Broome, Victoria.

Request detracts

Amid all the eulogies that followed the death of John G. Diefenbaker, my comments may appear those of an iconoclast, which I am not. I do honestly admire the old Chief's loyalty to the monarchy, his concern about Canadian unity and his love of Parliament and the democratic process.

There are, however, a few things that I do find rather distasteful and, as a free citizen in a free country, I have no hesitation to point them out.

It seems rather unusual that he requested a state funeral. A state funeral is given by the government in power to statesmen, outstanding war heroes, etc. in recognition of their contribution to their country.

There is no doubt that the Canadian government would have unanimously approved of a state funeral for a man who devoted his life to public service. But to request this last tribute detracts, not adds, to the solemnity of the occasion.

What a contrast between this request and the modesty of the late Lester B. Pearson, Secretary of the UN ambassador, diplomat and Nobel Prize winner for his intervention in solving the Suez crisis which might have developed into an armed conflict.

In recognition of Pearson's role in international affairs there is a college that bears his name: the former Liberal PM didn't ask for this honor: it was bestowed upon him by a grateful nation, to perpetuate his memory which will last forever.

John G. Diefenbaker saw to that as to leave his mark on posterity, by bequeathing a large part of his estate to a Saskatchewan museum filled with his memorabilia, by a distribution of some of his works to high school students and by a recreation centre that will bear his name in his constituency.

Surely the good people of Prince Albert would have named a stadium, a school, a recreation centre after their most famous son imported from Ontario. They would have declared Diefenbaker's Saskatchewan home a national heritage building, dedicated streets, hospitals, etc. to the man's memory.

These tributes are, and should be, a spontaneous expression of a country's, of a province's, of a city's feelings. But if they are requested in a will and testament, they lose most of their significance. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

A little history

Re: your story in the Times, Aug. 25 relating to the old horse buses in London, England. My father was one of the originals who drove from Central Meat Market to Stamford Street over Black Friar's Bridge which then was a two-lane cobbled bridge. His bus was known as the Halfpenny Bumper. He used to take his dinner every Sunday covered in a red handkerchief. They were days of hard work and no money. He also drove for Patrick Heath, Grays Inn Road, the four-in-hand coach to the Derby with the gentry with postillion and also drove the first petrol-driven bus out of Holloway garage for the London General Omnibus Company.

I could tell you a lot more about Clerkenwell, when it was rough, and London. — A. G. Steen, 1410 Fort Street.

National interest comes first

Canada vs kingdom of Alberta

ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Joe Clark wants to co-operate with the provincial premiers rather than confront them, but sooner or later he is going to have to deal with the question of who controls Alberta's oil: The Alberta government or the national Parliament?

In Opposition, Clark tended to side with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed in his view that provincial resources are entirely under provincial control. But as national leader, he must surely have winced when Lougheed detailed his claim to jurisdiction at the premier's conference last week.

Under the terms of confederation, resources are under provincial ownership, at least when times are normal and there is no national emergency. But Lougheed expanded on this position at the conference when he issued a statement:

"With ownership of natural resources implicitly goes the right of a province to decide how to develop its natural resources, how to produce its natural resources, when to produce the natural resources, whether or not to sell its natural resouces."

This, he suggested, was part of the confederation pact and could not be changed. There was not a word from Ottawa and none of the premiers was ready, it seems, to contradict Lougheed's extraordinary claim.

Yet the claim is clearly nonsense and Clark, at some stage, is going to have to assert the national interest over the interests of Alberta, or of any other province.

The Fathers of Confederation intended the national government in Ottawa to be the senior government. As John A. Macdonald put it during the debates on confederation, Ottawa was to be responsible for "all the great subjects of legislation." The provinces were to be responsible for "only such powers as may be required for local purposes."

The national Parliament was given authority to override provincial governments in several ways. Parliament can levy such taxes as it considers necessary, while the provincial taxing power is limited. Parliament can disallow provincial legislation, or take under its jurisdiction works within a province which are considered to be of wider public interest.

Parliament also has authority over trade and commerce moving over the borders of a province, and in a national emergency Ottawa has broad authority to legislate to ensure "peace, order and good government."

Most of the time, Ottawa does not choose to exercise its constitutional powers and the provinces are free to manage their natural resources as they please. To cite only a few examples, Ontario makes the rules for its forest industry, Quebec regulates its iron ore mines, Saskatchewan controls its potash industries.

And most of the time, Alberta has been free to make the rules for its oil and natural gas resources. But in 1973 we encountered "the energy crisis," and it has become apparent that Alberta's energy resources are of national rather than provincial importance.

We simply can't leave it to Lougheed and his pals to decide when to produce oil and gas, whether or not to sell it to consumers in other provinces and in the United States, and what price to charge.

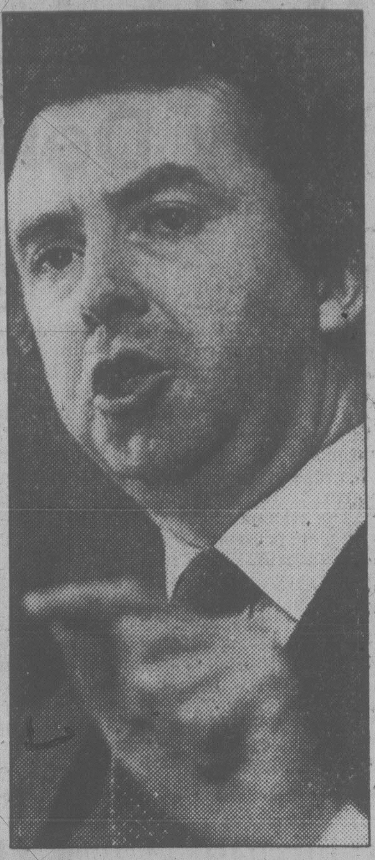
Such decisions are vital to the national interest and they must be made in the national Parliament.

The absurdity of Lougheed's position is apparent when it is understood that he is claiming, among many other things, that Alberta, if it wishes, can simply turn off the tap feeding oil and gas to other parts of Canada. No national goverment could allow any Alberta government to do any such thing.

The national Parliament, in fact, has already assumed the power to fix the price of oil and to ration it if necessary, and few will challenge its constitutional authority, despite Lougheed's claims.

The Fathers of Confederation clearly intended the national interest to prevail over provincial autonomy, and the British North America Act, as interpreted by the courts, confirms Ottawa's authority in an emergency.

If he is to be seen as a national leader, Clark is going to have to make that clear to Lougheed.



CLARK . . . that must be answered

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — We're never long in Canada without some news of consequence about immigration. The reigning story is "the boat people". Three different aspects of immigration caught my eye last weekend, each with a tie-in to the massive influx of Chinese from Vietnam.

Firstly, there was the Lord's Prayer story from Toronto. No longer will the day start in Toronto classrooms with the recitation of this well-known prayer.

The move was long overdue, according to some enthusiasts for the cancellation of the prayer. As a board spokesman said: "We can't shove the dominant view down all the minority throats."

The cause-and-effect link with immigration is obvious. Toronto and Ontario are not what they were. Think back to the immediate post-war years. Remember when Premier George Drew, also functioning as minister of education, led a successful drive to get more godliness back into our schools through regular religious teaching by accredited pastors.

The public debate was not over something as simple as the Lord's Prayer; Yes or No, but over the scale of teaching Christianity in the schools. The main objections — which failed — were really not against the teaching of Christianity or a Christ- or God-centred school but over who should teach and what doctrines should be emphasized.

Even the most liberally-minded CCFers of the time failed to argue in the legislature against the teaching of religion. Ontario was accepted as being a Christian society, by and large, and therefore Christian evangelism had a place.

It's only 12 or 13 years since Tom Kent, then federal deputy minister for immigration, produced and got through an immigration policy designed, among other things so far as he was concerned, to break up "Tory and WASP" Toronto eventually through polyethnic immigration.

The decision of the Toronto Board of Education is the clearest of much plain evidence that the Kent policy has succeeded. Toronto is now overwhelmingly non-Christian and secular. It is also so polyethnic and multicultural in its style or vogues (as seen in the media, restaurants, entertainment, etc.) that we can already forget the cant phrases our politicians were using a year or so ago about "two founding peoples" or "the two charter groups". Obviously, the next step is from bilingualism and multiculturalism to multilingualism.

A second aspect of immigration affairs I found in a letter in last Saturday's Globe and Mail from one John H. Tory. I think it possible this correspondent is from a Toronto family of four generations' prominence. If I'm right, he's of the kind of dominant cluster in Tory and WASP Toronto which Tom Kent was trying to deprive of its power and influence. If so, there's both irony and paradox in the content of the letter because Tory is also seeking to change things in Canada.

Tory argues that we should not object in the thousands of boat people because of our current economic difficulties. These immmigrants will not be a burden. They'll find work quickly. Moreover, they are a grand addition to the pool of entrepreneurial talent in Canada. These good people, writes Tory, "believe in free enterprise." He ended his letter:

"The very essence of our democracy and of our free enterprise system requires a great deal more from all of us." And lots of boat people!

I came upon the Tory letter just after a chat with Bob Rae, the NDP MP for Toronto Broadview. He'd been talking about the changing face of Toronto and particularly about the large increase in the Chinese in his riding, a surge which the boat people will sustain.

I noted that when I'd been a politician the hardest of the ethnic communities to get a handle on was the Chinese. Rae said that this was his experience too; that the Chinese as a community in Toronto seemed to be very conservative-minded on both social and economic issues, if not right wing. Such an image, of course, equates perfectly with John Tory's message in the Globe that not only is it humane to bring in the Chinese from Vietnam, it represents an enormous boost for free enterprise.

My third immigration item came from Vancouver columnist Doug Collins. I have reviewed his book on Immigration, Immigration: The Destruction of English Canada. In it he attacks our recent and current immigration policies. They are taking us inexorably towards such diversification that Canada shall be a microscosmic replica of the world as a whole.

Collins wrote to me with "a faint criticism": "You said that you felt I felt that the nation had been hoodwinked. That is true, up to a point. More pertinent is the fact that not a single politician that I know about has ever chosen to campaign against immigration. What that has meant is that there has been no focal point of resistance, with the result that although the huge mass of population is "anti", they have not been able to express their feelings in any effective way. But ordinary people have not been hoodwinked, for they have known very well what was going on."

At first I thought Collins wrong, but some checking in Hansard indices and party platforms shows he's right for modern times. One must go back to the mid-30s and the worst of the Depression to find politicians attacking immigration to Canada.

Of cabbages and lemons

Diary from a slow August:

Monday — Paid $2 at the supermarket today for a box of Grape Nuts. Reminded of Christmas, 1936, when a rich relative gave Aunt Pat $100 as a Xmas present. Entire family stunned. Great debate: Should they buy a house with the hundred bucks or go to Europe? Nowadays Aunt Pat could convert it to 50 boxes of Grape Nuts. Enough for everybody to eat Grape Nuts for breakfast every day for 50 weeks. Not bad, but everybody would be sick of Grape Nuts after two months. Why would anybody name anything Grape Nuts?

Tuesday — President Carter campaigning and/or solving oil problems on Mississippi steamboat. Stops for crowd, asks same how many of them think United States is the greatest country on earth. Everybody cheers. All think U.S. the greatest. Paid 69 cents at the supermarket today for a lemon. How much is this Carter trip costing?

Wednesday — Andrew Young uproar continues in press. Utter confusion. Everybody lying. Go with Pomeroy to the supermarket and pay 97 cents for two heads of cabbage. If Aunt Pat didn't want Grape Nuts she could have bought 206 cabbages and had enough money left over to weigh herself seven times and buy a Hearst newspaper. Great Hearst newspapers in those days. Full of Marion Davies and outraged anti-vivisectionist editorials with whole words capitalized at random. "Would YOU subject LOVELY Marion DAVIES to the HORRORS of VIVISECTION?"

Thursday— President still cruising, crowds still agreeing U.S. is the greatest country on earth. Reminds me of mother's advice: If you don't blow your own horn, nobody will do it for you. Dubious theory. Remember that time I started blowing own horn in 1938 and four guys came along and punched me in the nose. Why did 1938 kids always punch you in the nose? Nowadays kids shoot each other in horn-blowing showdowns. Harder to get guns in 1938, of course. I hated being punched in the nose. Haven't blown own horn since 1938, except very quietly. Nice thing about women — they don't punch you in the nose for hollow bluster. They'll shoot you, though, but no more than anybody else.

Pomeroy asked me today to explain the Andrew Young uproar. I said something like, "What else are the papers going to heave and groan about? The only other news is about some prisoners who escaped from a chain gang." Need the Loch Ness monster this August, but no sightings. Pomeroy and I had some drinks tonight. After two martinis, Pomeroy told me how great I was. I didn't want to agree out loud because it might get his dander up and get me a punch in the nose, so I told him he was even greater than I was, but he demurred. Pomeroy is one of the last gentlemen. He said that while he was great enough for an average Joe, he would never be in my league when it came to greatness. I made him a third martini, but the women came and made us eat something, which spoiled a very promising evening.

Friday — I paid a dollar for four newspapers to read about Andrew Young. President still steamboating. Editorial writers, colummnists, analyzers all very testy. Think Carter ought to be at his desk in Washington dealing with Middle East problem, which is absolutely hopeless and getting worse, as usual. Not clear why Carter can cope with hopeless problems better at Washington desk than on distant steamboats.

Reminds me of a desk I once had in Washington when I had hopeless problems with adolescent kids. This desk no good at all for dealing with adolescent-kid problems. Neither was the living room couch, the dining room table or the backyard barbecue pit, so I went to Europe. Adolescent problems couldn't be dealt with there either, but it was more fun failing in Europe than it was at a desk in Washington.

Saturday — Went with Pomeroy to the wine shop to pay $9 for $2 wine and Pomeroy showed me a station wagon made in Germany. "That thing costs $24,000" he said.

"That's not so much" I said. "Basically, it's just 12,000 boxes of Grape Nuts."

"Why would anybody pay $24,000 for a station wagon?" Pomeroy asked.

"It's got four bedrooms and two baths" I said. "If the guy is buying it on a 20-year mortgage, at the present rate of inflation it will be a better buy than 69-cent lemons by 1999."

I suspect Pomeroy thinks I'm a fool and doesn't respect me. He didn't even bother to point out that any idiot could see the station wagon had no bedrooms at all.

Sunday — Carlyle dropped in full of self-approval after nude swimming. Told him I had just returned myself from nude tennis. He was shocked. Told him that, what's more, I was going nude bicycling just before tea time but proposed to do some nude smoking immediately and asked him to join me in cigars. Nude smoking is a lot more sensible than nude swimming, I told him, since it prevents you from burning holes in your clothing. Carlyle saw that I was merely playing the fool and went off to tell Pomeroy about the exultation of being bare in the surf. I filled a bowl with Grape Nuts, stripped in the bathroom, got into a hot tub and enjoyed some nude eating.

Motherhood to apples . . . New Democrats air woes

Canadian Press

Motherhood, fatherhood, apples, nuclear power and a province-wide party newspaper are among resolutions to be considered by the provincial NDP during the weekend.

More than 900 delegates expected at the annual convention which opened today in Vancouver will be asked by the Richmond branch to encourage and support legalization of midwifery because "it is the woman's right to choose the circumstances in which she will give birth."

The Richmond resolution, one of 362 to be presented during the three-day meeting, says legalization of midwifery could have only a positive effect on obstetrics and will make it safer for "the growing number of women birthing at home."

The South Okanagan constituency organization wants the party to actively encourage and support expansion of apple-growing in the Okanagan Valley and other suitable areas.

The controversial subject of herbicides is to be debated, with the Dewdney constituency requesting that the next NDP government set up a research committee on herbicides, pesticides and chemicals "to determine toxicity levels and protect the public, wildlife and forests from needless and often detrimental spraying now being done."

The Central Fraser Valley consituency association wants to boost fatherhood, asking that at least one-third of child custody cases be awarded to the fathers, subject to periodical review and that men be entitled to the same social assistance as women.

The Cowichan-Malahat club requests an immediate stop to work on a 500,000-kilovolt transmission lines being built from Sechelt, north of Vancouver, to Vancouver Island to provide more electricity to the Island which has suffered from periodic power blackouts during the summer.

Richmond wants to conserve coal resources and consider building a refinery to convert coal into automobile fuel.

Delegates will be asked to support a move to publish a province-wide newspaper so the party and affiliated trade unions will be able to take their message to the voters.

New Democrats and supporters experienced in all aspects of communications, newspaper publishing and distribution would be encouraged to take an active role in the establishment and operation of such a publication.

The NDP already has its own newspaper in the form of The Democrat but this is criticized frequently by members.

Barrett earlier fanned speculation he might step down, but has subsequently indicated he will stand for re-election.

Drugs, liquor lethal

KELOWNA (CP) — The death of a man March 27 in the RCMP jail was due to combined effects of drugs, alcohol and acute hepatitis, a coroner's jury found Thursday.

The jury ruled that the death of James Elmer Woodside, 25, of Kelowna, was unnatural but accidental and recommended that jail guards be trained in first aid and recussitation techniques.

Woodside was arrested outside a local nightclub at about 2:30 a.m. March 27 for being drunk in a public place. He was found dead by a jail guard about seven hours later.

Sky-eye job fears

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Faculty members at the College of New Caledonia fear that an eye in the sky will put their jobs in jeopardy.

The college board of directors has agreed to a joint satellite program to start this fall. Five courses will beamed from the British Columbia Institute of Technology in Burnaby to six B.C. colleges, including New Caledonia.

A faculty spokesman said that some courses cover areas already served by or areas that could be served by New Caledonia faculty.

"This cuts into job security," said John Waters, a member of the faculty association. "Some of the courses overlap existing programs."

The five satellite courses to be offered this fall are mining, forest utilization, hospitality and tourism, construction administration and a graduate nurses' refresher course. Waters said the college has instructors for both mining and forest utilization.

Principal Charles McCaffray disagreed, saying that the college has no instructors specifically trained to teach those two courses.

"That's a lot of malarky that job security is a question here," said McCaffray.

CP yards draw hazard warning

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Canadian Pacific's downtown marshalling yards are the most dangerous of their kind in Canada and could endanger up to 50,000 people in case of an explosion, Vancouver Fire Chief Armand Konig warned Thursday.

In a report to city council's standing committee on transportation, Konig said the "close proximity of the hazardous area (the CPR marshalling yards) to buildings housing 30,000 to 50,000 people creates the potential for a disaster of major proportions."

City officials have expressed concern about the transportation of dangerous materials since last September, when a truck spilled part of its chlorine gas load at a major downtown intersection, forcing evacuation of the area.

A CPR spokesman said the railway is considering other locations for the yards.

Fake U.S. bills at PNE

VANCOUVER (UPC) — City police have seized an undisclosed number of counterfeit U.S $20 bills passed at the Pacific National Exhibition, a police spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said police were alerted to the phoney bills when they were turned in at a local bank Wednesday. Counterfeit U.S. 20s were also seized at the fair last year, he said.

He refused to confirm or deny reports that charges were pending against two men in custody after a raid on a Vancouver home resulted in the seizure of 58 counterfeit bills.

WIN! $1,000^{00} IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Honey, wine to flow again as strikes end

There was good news in the honey and wine businesses in British Columbia Thursday — strikes have ended in both. Hodgson Bee Supplies Ltd. and the Teamsters Union local 351 negotiated their first contract and ended a strike at the plant. About six workers are scheduled to return to the job next Tuesday to get Bee Cee Honey back on the market. The Canadian Brewery Workers Union, local 300, meanwhile, settled with Andres Wines in Port Moody after a month-long shutdown.

Kettle Valley reprieve

CP Rail will delay ripping up its tracks on the Kettle Valley line between Penticton and Midway, according to Tourism Minister Don Phillips. "We have reached an agreement that the track from Penticton to McCulloch Lake will not be touched until June 1," Phillips said. He said the delay will allow the Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society time to survey the line and conduct a feasibility study on preservation of a 96-kilometre section of the 208-kilometre line which was built in 1912 and 1913, and which closed in May, 1964.

Chemainus pickets barred

The Labor Relations Board has ordered the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers Union to remove a picket line which has shut down MacMillan Bloedel's Chemainus sawmill. The pickets, members of Local 8 of the PPWC, are on strike at MacBlo's Harmac pulp mill at Nanaimo and picketing had spread to the Chemainus operation.

Alert Bay happy: McClelland

Health Minister Bob McClelland said Thursday that most Alert Bay residents are happy with his solutions to health care problems in the community and that a protest by Indians when he spoke Wednesday was organized in advance. During a visit that day to the isolated island community, the minister announced a new 15-bed hospital, an alcohol detoxification unit, changes in hospital regulations and financial support to help attract another doctor to the area.

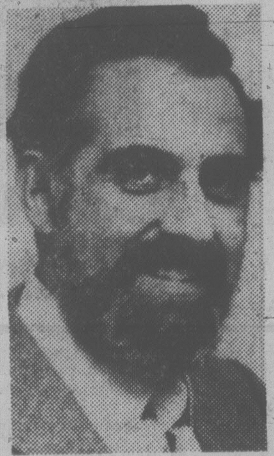
Target practice misfires

Two Vancouver youths were arrested Thursday after reports that shots were being fired at cars from an apartment building in that city's east end. Police tactical squads went to the area but found only a pellet gun. Police said the shots came from the pellet gun, which was being fired at a cardboard box for target practice.

Acute care concerns

Doctors at Vancouver General Hospital are alarmed by the high number of long term care patients occupying beds meant for acute care cases. In a statement the hospital's medical board says chronic care patients are taking up almost 15 per cent of the hospital's 1,473 acute care beds, delaying surgery and limiting admissions of genuine acute care cases. The board says the situation is threatening VGH's position as both a teaching and research hospital.

Red-faced on ad delay



JABOUR
. . . weekend specials?

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Lawyer Donald Jabour, who wants to challenge a rule that won't let him advertise his services, didn't have his day Thursday.

The rebel North Vancouver lawyer was all set to challenge the Law Society of British Columbia by advertising his legal clinic's divorce prices in a Thursday paper — something the society forbids and could bar him from practice for.

But his ad didn't make the paper.

"They've made a liar out of me," a somewhat red-faced Jabour said Thursday. "The advertising guy from the (Vancouver) Sun didn't pick it up on time, so it's going in Saturday instead.

The 3¼-inch by 4½-inch advertisements which will now run in Saturday's Sun and Sunday's Province offer a free half-hour divorce consultation at his North Vancouver neighborhood law clinic, separation agreements for $175 and uncontested divorces for $350.

A second quarter-page ad to run in a North Shore weekly's real estate supplement Sunday will publicize the clinic's price for handling land title transfers.

"They're very simple black and white ads with a border," said Ray Williams of Campaign Communications Inc., which did the design work for Jabour. "Jabour's just testing the water with these."

The ads, which include fee schedules, would appear to breach the Law Society's rules regarding advertising, which restrict lawyers to discreet ads listing legal specialties, office hours and place of practice.

Jabour's move to advertise is only the latest in a controversial battle with the Law Society over the question of whether lawyers should be allowed to advertise their services.

In January, 1978, Jabour placed an ad in a local paper advertising the opening of his new clinic. The society, which at the time did not allow any type of advertising, found him guilty of "conduct unbecoming" and moved to suspend him for six months.

Jabour sued the society and won, with the B.C. Supreme Court ruling that the society did not have the power to stop lawyers from advertising. The society has appealed that ruling to the B.C. Court of Appeal; no date has been set for the case.

Meanwhile, Jabour says the lower court's ruling stands and is going ahead with his ads because he feels it is important to let the public know what they're getting into in terms of costs before they get to court.

The Law Society has declined to comment on possible suspension of Jabour until it sees the ads.

U.S. Indians seeking Canada asylum

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nine members of the Leonard Peltier Defence Committee, an offshoot of the radical American Indian Movement, were allowed to enter Canada from the United States on Thursday with the intention of seeking political asylum.

Gerry Douglas, a Canada immigration department supervisor, said the nine were admitted as visitors and will deal with the department's Vancouver office if they want to remain.

Douglas said one member of the group was detained at the Aldergove border crossing, east of Vancouver, because he was not admissible under the Immigration Act because of a criminal record, however, the man later was granted special ministerial dispensation and allowed to enter with the rest of the party.

He said all have the right to apply for political asylum from inside the country, but such cases are decided by a high-level ministerial committee in Ottawa.

Orville Milk, a spokesman for the Seattle-based defence committee, said in a telephone interview from the border crossing that the group had intended to apply for asylum after attending a weekend rally in the Vancouver area in support of Peltier, a former Indian movement leader now serving two life sentences in a U.S. federal prison for the murders of two FBI agents.

Milk said the group announced their intention to remain after its leader, Steve Robideau, was taken into custody by the RCMP because of a criminal record.

He said the group wants political asylum in Canada because of what he claimed was harassment and unwarranted arrests of defence committee members in the United States.

Peltier's case has been a rallying point for Indian groups on both sides of the border.

The former AIM leader was jailed for the murder of two FBI agents in a 1975 Indian protest on the Pine Ridge reservation in North Dakota. He was arrested in Alberta and eventually extradited to the United States for trial after a lenghty series of hearings.

TONGUES WERE WAGGING at a dog show in Toronto on the weekend when Tracy Dawe, 11, stuck out her tongue at her pet. The bulldog, aptly named Bold, immediately returned the gesture.

Nurses eye midwife role

Nurse midwives could lower medical costs and raise the standard of care for pregnant mothers and their babies, says a report by a committee of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C.

The association's board of directors has endorsed the report and committed itself to the introduction of nurse midwifery in B.C.

However, nurse midwives are not officially recognized in Canada.

The report says worldwide evidence, informed medical opinion and the demand for alternative methods to the present system of care during childbearing years point up the need for nurse midwives who would provide supervision, care and support during pregnancy, delivery and the post-partum period to low-risk mothers and their infants.

They can also provide expert nursing care for high-risk patients under the direction of a physician.

They can give counselling and teaching connected with pereparation for parenthood, family planning, infant care and common gynecological problems related to pregnancy.

Serving on the committee were three nurses, all graduates of nurse midwivery programs in Britain, Canada and the United States. They noted that many countries with lower death rates among newborn infants commonly used nurse midwives.

The quality of care for infants and their mothers would remain high and, in rural areas, might increase, the report said.

Nurse midwives, the report continued, would be more practised at delivering babies than many general practitioners. They could be expected to do about 100 deliveries annually compared with an estimated 13 for the average general practitioner.

Although the B.C. Medical Association endorses the concept, the report says the role of the midwife, particularly as an independent practitioner, is still contentious.

The report recommends further discussions between the RNABC and the BCMA.

Geddes reports on ferries

Mediator Fred Geddes met representatives of ferry workers and the B.C. Ferry Corp. today to give them his report on negotiations which adjourned Wednesday.

Geddes did not say whether he would report out of the dispute or whether he had been asked to do so.

The 2,600-member B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union has threatened rotating strike action to back up its contract demands, but union president Shirly Mathieson has said such action would not be taken until after the Labor Day weekend.

The union has already served strike notice against the corporation but cannot legally strike until Geddes gives his report to Labor Minister Allan Williams.

When the ferry workers last walked out; over Thanksgiving weekend in 1977, the provincial government ordered a 90-day cooling-off period and ordered the workers to return to work.

Neither side has released details of negotiations, but wages, increasing sick leave costs and the use of casual workers have been the major issues preventing a settlement.

In other government contract talks, negotiations between the B.C. Buildings Corp. and the B.C. Government Employees' Union have broken down and the union is conducting an immediate strike vote.

"After six weeks of negotiations we are no closer to a settlement than when we began," said John Fryer, general secretary of the union. "We received our first wage offer Aug. 29 which fell considerably short of the recent settlement between the union and the provincial government."

Fryer also pointed out that wages are not the main issue. He said the corporation is still insisting on removing provisions from the collective agreement that were previously negotiated.

"Until the corporation is prepared to abandon its recalcitrant attitude and make a reasonable offer, there is no point in continuing negotiations."

Fryer added that the union wants to continue meaningful negotiations but feel there is little chance of that until the management decides to offer its employees the same wages and benefits other provincial employees in the same union receive.

Fryer did not reveal how large a wage increase the union is demanding.

The union represents 43,000 workers and is the largest public service union in the province. One of its 11 components represents 1,000 employees of the B.C. Buildings Corp.

Work begun on bus depot

Planning for a new downtown bus depot has been under way for some time, Ald. Bill Tindall said Thursday.

The city representative on the Urban Transit Authority was replying to Chamber of Commerce concern that the city could be without a bus terminal when the lease on the Douglas Street depot property expires in two years. The property is owned by the Empress Hotel.

Chamber transportation director Larry Martell said the provincial government should be trying to find a permanent site and preparing the plans for a new terminal.

"The chamber seems concerned that nothing is happening," Tindall said. "That's not true. There is planning going on behind the scenes by Capital Regional District and Urban Transit Authority planners."

Tindall agrees there should be a new interurban depot designed to accommodate transit buses as well.

One problem is to find a downtown site large enough for both, but the hangup with UTA is that it involves the new authority in takeover of B.C. Hydro assets, including land, Tindall said.

Of the 15 local governments party to the UTA, 13 have signed the agreement, leaving only the CRD and Greater Vancouver Regional District to complete the legalities.

In the case of the CRD, terms of appeal are not acceptable, although Tindall indicated that was not a serious matter. A larger obstacle is thrown up by GVRD which does not agree with the cost-sharing formula to cover deficits.

Two of the sites under consideration for a new combined depot are provincial government land on Humboldt at Blanshard, and at Blanshard and Pandora.

Socred spending triple NDP

The Social Credit party spent almost three times more than the NDP to get elected in the May 10 provincial election.

The Socred government was re-elected, but with a reduced majority and three cabinet ministers were defeated. The party got 31 of the 57 seats created by redistribution. The NDP took the rest.

Before the election, Social Credit held 35 of the 55 seats, the NDP had 18, and Liberal and Tories one each.

Figures compiled by the chief electoral officer's staff show the Socred central committee spent $1,089,000 on the campaign, compared with $382,000 by the NDP.

This does not include money spent by individual candidates, which usually adds up to more than the parties have spent.

The Conservative committee spent $62,000, and the Liberal party didn't spend a cent, leaving it up to the individual candidates, none of whom were elected.

Ilosone long gone from city hospitals

Spokesmen at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals say they do not prescribe a drug which has been banned by U.S. health authorities.

But health officials in B.C. say they know nothing about any move by Canadian health authorities to ban the drug Ilosone, used by millions of people who take it in the belief that it's a safe alternative to penicillin.

The U.S. government's Food and Drug Administration said Thursday it has asked the Eli Lilly Co. to withdraw the medication, known generically as erythromycin estolate. The FDA said Ilosone is no more effective than alternative forms of erythromycin and can cause side effects.

In fact, the FDA said its "adverse reaction reports" showed that 93 per cent involved the use of Ilosone.

Ilosone is prescribed between 7 and 8 million times a year, according to drug industry estimates.

Donna Mae Kommes, director of pharmacy at Jubilee, said the drug hasn't been used at the hospital for about eight years.

"We have not been using the drug for several years because of the reported side effects," said Kommes, who hadn't heard of the latest move by the FDA.

Mrs. Merridy Dennis, director of pharmacy at Victoria General, checked records as far back as 1972 to confirm that her department hasn't dispensed the drug for at least seven years.

A spokesman at the Health Protection Branch of the federal ministry of health and welfare said no word has been received from Ottawa on possible problems with Ilosone.

The Lilly company strongly defended its product, also under attack from the Ralph Nader Health Research Group, which asked Thursday that the drug be banned.

Giant British chain in price-slash move

LONDON (CP) — One of Britain's largest retail outlets is cutting prices by up to 15 per cent, touching off the possibility that a battle of the shops may be in the offing.

Marks and Spencer, a blue-chip retailer with branches in Canada, has launched a £11 million ($29 million) package of cuts lasting until at least Christmas.

That the move is something more than a periodic business adjustment is seen in the fact that this is only the third major price-slashing campaign by this company in the last 30 years.

Business analysts suggest the motive for the move is that retailers are being squeezed between sharply rising costs and consumer resistance. They predict other companies may have to follow the Marks and Spencer lead.

Roy Burgess, deputy managing director of the rival British Home Stores, says: "We have no plans at the moment for changing our targets for the year. But we will monitor very closely what happens."

Price Minister Sally Oppenheim said of the Marks and Spencer move: "More power to their elbow. This is a perfect example of free enterprise in a competitive market place bringing better service and lower irices and maintaining employment and productivity. I am delighted . . ."

Brian Howard, joint managing director, says the cuts have been forced on Marks and Spencer by a shopping recession.

"Since tax increases in June, sales have dropped in the region of five per cent," he said.

Sir Marcus Sieff, company chairman, said: "Ninety-two per cent of St. Michael (Marks and Spencer house brand) goods are British made. "We therefore have a considerable responsibility to more than 300 United Kingdom suppliers and to the 200,000 people employed in the production and distribution of St. Michael goods and to our loyal customers."

The suppliers, by cutting wholesale prices to Marks and Spencer, are expected to bear about one-third of the £11-million cuts. However, not all of the 300 suppliers are going along with the promotion.

Some examples of how the move will benefit consumers:

Women's wool car coats and raincoats will be reduced from £35 ($92) to £29.50 ($78). Men's shirts will be reduced from £7.50 ($20) to £6.99 ($18.50).

Mazda slashes subcompacts

TORONTO (CP) — Hiroyuki Uchida, president of Mazda Motors of Canada Ltd., says the company has cut the price of its subcompact GLC regular 1980 hatchback and will not increase prices in other models in an attempt to improve its market position.

The three-door hatchback will be lowered $500 to $4,290 and the cut will put the car at the lowest price level of any other hatchback in its class, either foreign made or North American.

There will be no increases on its other models, the rotary-engine RX-7 and the new 626 sedan, Uchida said.

The move by Mazda is not likely to go unanswered by the competition, which likely will mean a continuation into the 1980 model year of what is already a highly-competitive Canadian small car market.

"Since Mazda came to Canada 11 years ago it has seen good times and then bad times, now it appears to be good times again," said Uchida, former vice-president of U.S.-based Mazda Motors of America, who took over as Mazda Canada president in 1977.

Uchida said the recent strength and stability of the Canadian dollar against the Japanese yen gave Mazda the opportunity to reduce the price of the GLC.

Canadian Bar swings right again

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association's liberal period, after a brief flowering during the late 1970s, ended Thursday as lawyers rejected civil rights resolutions and urged government to outlaw police strikes.

Lawyers voted against a resolution urging Justice Minister Jacques Flynn to tell Alberta prosecutors to ask for discharges in cases of simple possession of marijuana.

The resolution, drafted by Alberta lawyers, noted that Alberta lays more marijuana possession charges than Quebec or British Columbia — both more populous provinces — and issues discharges in only two per cent of cases. Alberta's rate of discharges was thought to be the lowest in the country.

Parliament in the early 1970s authorized judges to discharge persons guilty of minor offences such as possession. The discharge, used in 46 per cent of possession cases in Ontario, means those convicted do not have a criminal record.

The lawyers voted down a resolution urging that Parliament make it a specific crime for police to break into homes and offices to plant bugs or to fish around for evidence of wrongdoing without a warrant.

There was no argument against this resolution. But when a vote was called, more than half the 300 delegates in the hotel ballroom voted against it.

"Maybe it's just Calgary," one delegate said of the resolution session, which ended a four-day convention in this oil-rich city.

Getting caught with a marijuana cigarette here usually means a $150 fine and sometimes a jail term.

In recent years, bar conventions have focused on issues such as national unity and freedom of information — on which the association in 1976 mounted a strong campaign for open government.

This year's theme was energy. But the theme was accompanied by no resolutions.

And the 1,300 delegates left unchallenged oil company arguments that taxes should be reduced and profits increased to allow more development of oil reserves.

Quebec delegates had to threaten another split to win passage of a compromise resolution on a constitutional reform report drafted a year ago by an expert committee.

Toronto delegate William Somerville objected that a resolution proposing approval in principle of the report would mean approval of a proposal to "jettison the Queen" as head of state in Canada.

In a compromise move, delegates passed a resolution endorsing the report as a good basis for constitutional reform.

The resolutions committee rejected a proposal that police be required to tell an arrested person that he has a right to a lawyer. Supporters nevertheless forced a vote and it was passed, possibly because a debate would have driven the session into overtime.

The delegates refused to strike a special committee to look into native land claims. Instead they referred the issue to the association's constitutional committee, which already has a heavy workload.

A resolution proposing that police strikes be outlawed won enthusiastic support.

Hamilton lawyer Cecil Robinson said Ontario doesn't allow police or firemen to strike.

"The rest of Canada should do the same."

Other supporters referred to damage done during a recent police strike in Bathurst, N.B.

The convention alsorejected a proposal to transfer all jurisdiction over Canadian family life or breakdowns from Ottawa to the provinces.

Judge sees risk to independence from bureaucrats

CALGARY (CP) — Federal and provincial bureaucrats are threatening the independence of Canadian judges, says the head of a new judges' association.

"Until we get public servants out of the domination and control of the judiciary, the public is never going to believe we're independent," Justice Gordon Hall of Manitoba told a meeting of the Canadian Judges Conference.

"Crown corporations have more independence than judges."

Civil servants control court budgets, affecting matters such as extra staff and courtrooms needed to handle the growing amount of court business.

Hall said the provincial governments must hand over control of the budgets to the courts and give courts complete control over their own administration, a measure now being tried in British Columbia.

Independence of the courts is the only buffer between the citizen and the state, said Bruce Elman, a University of Alberta law professor.

"Today, we are facing more government regulation, which means the state and individual come into conflict more. Therefore there's a greater importance of an independent judiciary for two reasons: first, so the individual will feel he's had his day in court even if he loses and, second, to prevent abuses of power."

The formation of the new judges' association is significant, said Hall.

"It means the message (to governments) is that all is not well. There's a need for co-operation, understanding and reform."

MPs zero in on GNP dip

OTTAWA (UPC) — The Clark government has given Canadians "nothing but drift and inactivity," opposition MPs said after government figures showed Canada's gross national product in a decline for the first time since 1976.

Statistics Canada said the GNP slipped during the first quarter by 0.7 per cent as a result of the weakening American economy.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent and Liberal finance critic Herb Gray both noted Thursday that Prime Minister Joe Clark's Conservatives had campaigned vigorously on the economy.

But, the critics said, since winning power May 22, the Tories had backed down on their promises to stimulate the economy.

"There's no doubt there's a turndown in the economy of very serious proportion, the first decline in three years," Broadbent told reporters soon after the Statistics Canada GNP figures were released.

"Mr. Clark campaigned not only during the past election, but for the past two years against the Liberals on the economy, saying economic leadership is required. Now is the time to show it," he said.

Gray, in one of the most stinging Liberal attacks yet, criticized Clark and his 11-member inner cabinet for leaving Ottawa to meet in Jasper, Alta., when Canadians need economic direction.

"So far we've seen from them nothing but drift and inactivity," he said.

'First step' to N.W.T. rule

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jake Epp told officials of the Northwest Territories government Thursday that Ottawa is prepared to take "the first obvious step" toward responsible government in the North.

Epp said in a luncheon speech that John Parker, commissioner of the Territories, will receive instructions "soon" to increase the size of the territorial executive committee to as many as seven elected members from three.

The government is awaiting a report on constitutional development in the North by former Liberal cabinet minister C. M. Drury before making decisions on the future of responsible government, Epp said.

Flora goes to bat for Bakic

OTTAWA (UPC) — External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has appealed to Yugoslav authorities to "speedily resolve" legal proceedings against a retired Edmonton janitor who was tried and acquitted on war crimes last spring.

Jakov Bakic, 67, was found not guilty last March on charges he executed Communist partisan prisoners during the Second World War but he was being held in the Yugolav town of Montenegro pending a prosecution appeal of his acquittal.

In a telegram to Yugoslavia's External Affairs Minister Josip Vrhovec, MacDonald reportedly said it would be "a great kindness" if the matter were "speedily resolved."

Suing estate of ex-wife's 2nd husband

MONTREAL (CP) — The father of two young girls has filed a $150,000 damage suit on their behalf against the estate of a man he says shot to death his daughters' mother and grandmother before committing suicide.

57 food stores charged

OTTAWA (UPC) — Fifty-seven Ontario food stores — including Loblaws, IGA and Safeway outlets — have been charged with misleading consumers by adding ground pork to meat sold as ground beef, says Consumer Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence.

The charges, which carry maximum fines of $5,000 and three years in jail, were laid following federal inspections of 199 stores across Canada. However, all the stores charged were in Ontario, most of them in the heavily-populated southwest corner of the province.

In a statement Thursday, Lawrence said 57 retailers had mixed economically-priced pork with ground beef and were marketing it as ground beef. Another 20 stores, where inspectors found traces of pork in the ground beef, have been sent letters of warning.

"The charges were laid against those stores which were the worst offenders," Lawrence said.

Owners of the stores, including the national chains of Loblaws, IGA and Safeway, were expected to appear in court to respond to the charges.

Lawrence said he was alarmed by the results in Ontario.

"There is still no widespread substitution of pork in ground beef in Quebec, the Atlantic provinces or in the West," he said. "However, the numerous samples taken from Ontario stores had very high levels of pork. In some cases, more than 40 percent."

Lawrence said the widespread fraud forced him to continue the investigations to stop the mixing practice.

"From the point of view of economic fraud, for health and religious reasons, I personally find this a reprehensible practice, and will do everything I can to make sure it is stopped.

"There is a sufficient price difference at the moment between beef and pork to make it economically advantageous to add the pork to beef an sell it as ground beef. Previously, it may have been chicken or horse meat."

Policemen won't drop their guns

TORONTO (CP) — Mel Connolly, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, has rejected as ludicrous a suggestion by a Toronto-area group that police lay down their guns for six months.

"I'm not prepared to risk even the injury of one police officer. They'd all be sitting ducks."

Connolly made his comments Thursday at a press conference called by the Voice of Concerned Canadians, a Toronto citizen's group, who urged police to go unarmed for a six-month trial.

Eli Anderson, spokesman for the non-profit organization, said the group also wants unarmed, plainclothes volunteers, or specially trained police officers to investigate domestic disputes to prevent what he called "needless killings."

FROG DAYS of August are reflected in expression on face of Eric Grafi, 5, of Kleinburg, Ont., taking a break from a training session for frog jumping contest slated for this weekend as part of local Binder Twine Festival.

Bottle ban enforced

TORONTO (CP) — Federal government inspectors are gearing up to clear shelves of explosive and illegal 1.5-litre soft drink bottles across Canada next week.

"If store owners knowingly violate the ban on these bottles, they'll suffer the consequences," Thomas Wright, spokesman for the consumer and corporate affairs department, said Thursday.

"But I'd be rather surprised if any of them challenge our inspectors when we come in with orders to clear the shelves."

Wright said inspection staffs across Canada will be more than doubled in an effort to visit as many stores as possible to make sure they're abiding by the ban on large bottles.

Inspections at the retail level are expected to start Tuesday and continue at least a week.

Inspectors have the power to seize the bottles and lay charges, under the Hazardous Products Act, if necessary.

Persons convicted of advertising, selling or importing a hazardous product face fines of up to $1,000, up to six months in jail, or both.

All 1.5-litre soft drink bottles were banned by the federal government on Tuesday after further testing following a ban of certain bottles of that size which were proved unsafe three weeks ago.

Wright said inspectors are contacting bottling plants this week to inform them of the total ban and enlist their co-operation in a recall of bottles already on store shelves.

Molson strike ends in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — A two-month-long strike at the Molson Alberta Brewery Ltd. ended Thursday when striking workers ratified an agreement reached that afternoon by negotiators.

No details of the one-year agreement were released.

Contract talks between Molson and the 91 members of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Softdrink and Distillery Workers Local 284 broke down last week and were only resumed Thursday.

"I UNNERSTAND THIS IS YOUR FIRST SQUARE MEAL SINCE YOU GOT MARRIED."

Contract Bridge ♠♡◇♣ B. Jay Becker

You are South and the bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠Q9 ♡J85 ◇AJ982 ♣AKQ
2. ♠J7 ♡94 ◇Q9872 ♣AK93
3. ♠Q62 ♡K975 ◇AK853 ♣10
4. ♠5 ♡72 ◇AQJ863 ♣K942

1. Six notrump. It is generally agreed that in this sequence North's two notrump bid shows extra values above a minimum opening bid. Theoretically, it indicates either 15 or 16 high-card points, as well as notrump distribution — probably 5-3-3-2.

It is therefore clear that partner will probably make six notrump. After all, you are contributing not only 17 high-card points but also the prospect of long-suit tricks in both diamonds and spades.

2. Three notrump. A raise to three notrump is strongly indicated. You have 10 high-card points, almost ideal notrump distribution, and a partner who is showing extra values above a minimum opening bid. It would be pointless to bid three clubs merely to show that you also have clubs. You have a notrump type of hand, so does your partner, and you should raise notrump. Besides, it's easier to make nine tricks in notrump that eleven tricks in a minor suit.

3. Three spades. It seems certain you have a game somehwere, but you can't be sure at this point where the game lies. Accordingly, you bid three spades (forcing) and let partner make the choice.

North will presumably bid game in spades if he has five of them. If he has only four spades, he will probably bid three notrump, which you would pass. If, by any chance, North were to bid four diamonds instead, you would go to five diamonds.

Note that a three heart bid over two notrump is deliberately avoided. North can't have four good hearts in view of his failure to bid two hearts over two diamonds.

4. Three notrump. This is simply a judgment call. The question you ask yourself is whether you think partner has a better chance to make nine tricks in notrump than you have to make eleven tricks in a five diamond contract. On balance, three notrump will probably be the easier contract to make.

You could temporize by bidding three clubs, but if North now bid three diamonds you still wouldn't know what to do next. The one other bid over two notrump that clearly would be wrong is three diamonds. This would be a signoff bid urging partner to pass. Your values are much too promising for that kind of bid.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, September 1
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Be original, direct, independent and make contact with one who can aid in fulfilling ambitions. Leo, Capricorn, Aquarius individuals could fill the bill. You're due for added recognition and a chance to imprint your own style.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Torrent of words, ideas could pour forth — be selective, regain sense of direction. Accent on philosophical concepts, long-distance communications. Pursue educational project. What seemed far away is closer than you might imagine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Frivolous approach to questions, people could prove costly. Know it and make decision based on serious examination of goals. One who makes money promises may actually be financially embarrassed. Key is to be self-reliant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lie low, go slow, be specific, thorough and play waiting game. Time is on your side. Accent on partnership, co-operative efforts, legal green light. One close to you, perhaps partner or mate, needs a special "pat on the back."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for change, chance for travel, gain through special written material and a variety of sensations. Those who share your basic interests will seek your counsel. Advocate conservative course. Avoid taking unnecessary risks. Good employment news due.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Read Leo message for valuable hint. What had been a speculative venture could get on "solid ground." Domestic situation due for favorable change. Apply individual, creative touch to efforts. Relationship is intensified.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Awareness of basic values is magnified. See places, people as they exist, not merely through haze of wishful thinking. Define terms, check sources, get land or property appraisal. Be a comparison shopper. Pices, Virgo persons play important roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): One who makes money promise is sincere, but there could be a delay. Know it and prepare accordingly. You successfully meet test or challenge. News from relative could be cause for celebration. Short trip might involve a Capricorn native.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish what you start, display sense of responsibility. You can strike chord of universal appeal. You're due for wider recognition, acclaim and financial gain. Aries, Libra individuals might play key roles. What was started, then discarded will be reactivated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Judgment, intuition and timing are on target. Know it and proceed with confidence. Stress independence of thought, action. Get to heart of matters. You receive assurances of love. Enthusiasm replaces lethargy. You get proverbial second chance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Answers can be found behind scenes. Gain indicated if you share knowledge. Emphasis on temporary confinement, recognition of necessary restrictions. Be aware of security requirements. Get promises in writing. One who aided in past makes reappearance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Accent on flexibility, fulfillment of hopes, desires. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Social activity is accelerated. Expand horizons. Look beyond the immediate — potential is greater than originally assumed.

IF SEPTEMBER 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are perceptive, original, independent, stubborn, and have a one-track mind where principles are concerned. You are creative, romantic and have a unique style. Many persons claim you are self-centered. In some degree, they are correct. Manily, however, you assign yourself goals and battle to reach them. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in you life. You complete an important project in September. You are due to be relieved of burden. By October, there should be clear sailing. Happiness will no longer be a stranger. Look for significant events this month to occur on the 8th, 17th and 26th.

"I found these two tickets on the bathroom floor," said Paul: "They could be valuable."

Steve took them. "Thanks a lot. Dad. They're for our Club raffle," he replied. "But no big deal. A dime a time, and there are only five hundred tickets in all."

"Well, I amused myself figuring something on their numbers," Paul told the boy. "They're consecutive, and the difference between their cubes is exactly seven times the square of our house number."

What was the number of their house?

Nurseryman grows BCRICs

VANCOUVER (CP) — A nurseryman in Surrey says he wants to exchange his own growth prospects for his customers' shares in the British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation (BCRIC).

Leo Warmerdam of Holland Nurseries has announced he will give his customers $30 for their five free BCRIC shares on purchases of more than $30, and will pay $25 to anyone else who just want to get rid of their five shares.

A similar promise of instant cash is giving a Vancouver druggist plenty of business lately, but brokers are saying they too can give customers the money, and more of it, the same day.

"It's just something I got in my head," said Warmerdam." I have good hope for BCRIC shares. It's an open market. I can get as many as I want."

Warmerdam, who has already purchased 5,000 shares, said he expects that most of the people who will take him up on his offer will be people who have just purchased a new home and need money or plants.

Ike Gaynor of Gaynors Drugs Ltd. here will give you cash for your shares at either his two stores, right up until midnight most nights of the week. That kind of convenience will cost, though, as Gaynor is paying $5.50 for each share. BCRIC shares closed at a value of $6.88 on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Thursday.

Meanwhile brokers such as Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd. are paying the market price minus their commission, in this case 25 cents a share, so that the seller gets $6.55 a share, said sales manager Bob Sutherland.

Gaynor said he is providing a service, "a convenience for a person who needs $25."

He pointed out that going downtown to a broker might require an hour, which in terms of today's wages might cost the shareholder five dollars.

"I'm making an investment and I'm taking a risk," said Gaynor. But that's not the way another broker, who pays the same $6.55 a share as Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd., sees it.

"Anybody paying less than that ($6.55 a share) is ripping off the public," Ron Webster of Richardson Securities said.

Webster's firm also promises same-day delivery of your cheque, but like Odlum Brown and T. B. Read, they say it takes a little longer to deal with blocks of shares numbering over 100.

"We have to sell those blocks on the market ourselves," said Webster.

Gaynor continues to a brisk business with BCRIC shares, though. So far he's accumulated approximately 500 shares.

"We're buying and selling and hoping to profit," Gaylor said." That's what it's all about, isn't it? We're taking a risk. It can drop two points as fast as it can gain two points."

All eligible B.C. residents were entitled to five free shares in the corporation which was formerly a Crown corporation. BCRIC shares began trading in August.

City electricians mulling strategy

The city electrical workers strike committee met Thursday afternoon to discuss strategy.

But they're still not saying when they plan to take strike action against the city.

The 15 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers employed by the city have been in a legal strike position since Wednesday.

They are responsible for operating street and traffic lights, maintaining police and fire radio systems and downtown coin-operated car parks.

But the effect of a strike could be much more widespread. The electrical workers have agreement from Canadian Union of Public Employees members and members of building trades unions to honor their picket lines.

"They respected our picket lines for three months, so there's no problem them respecting ours," says Jim Walker, the CUPE representative.

Walker says the IBEW has agreed to give them at least a few hours notice of any picketing.

City hall, public works yards, garbage collection, Memorial Arena, Athletic Park, and Johnson Street bridge construction are all potential targets of a strike by the IBEW.

In addition, the IBEW has 65 other members in the area who have agreed to help the 15 municipal workers with picket activity.

Of particular concern is construction work on the Johnson Street bridge where a Toronto construction company is re-pouring foundations.

The Mann Cup lacrosse finals, scheduled to start Tuesday at the Memorial Arena could also be hit.

IBEW business agent Jack Zettler says, the operating engineers at the arena will honor picket lines and "they could find themselves playing in the dark."

The union members are unhappy about a nine month lag before they get parity with B.C. Hydro workers.

Curtis firm on opposition to industry

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis says he's serious about conveying his opposition to the Royal Oak industrial park to other ministries, including that of Highways Minister Alex Fraser.

Fraser must approve the industrial park proposal before Saanich can proceed.

Asked if he has discussed the project with Fraser, Curtis said: "We are in the same building and we see each other all the time. It's not as if I had to set up an appointment three weeks in advance."

Council expects approvals from the highways and municipal affairs ministries by Sept. 10.

If they don't arrive by that date the delays will be attributed to political interference, Mayor Mel Couvelier said recently.

A 90-acre industrial park zone covering both sides of Glanford Avenue will be created as soon as the project is approved and another 38 acres in the north-west corner of the site will be zoned for mixed density use.

Council approved the project May 30 in a 5-4 vote.

The industrial park is strongly opposed by the Royal Oak Community Association.

Community association president Graham Hunter said the association is still trying everything possible to get the project cancelled.

Hunter said his executive is trying to set up a meeting with Fraser to talk about the inadequate road system and about heavy traffic problems the park would create.

It's looking good for ABC as fall ratings scramble nears

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1979-80 prime-time season is still in the future, but ABC seems to be building up steam for a powerful start.

Last season's front-running network listed 16 of the 20 highest-rated programs in the week ending Aug. 19, figures from the A. C. Nielsen Co. show; and won the prime-time ratings race for the fourth time in a row.

ABC and CBS exchanged first place several times in the early part of the summer, until the last week in July. ABC has been No. 1 since then, with Three's Company, the popular situation comedy, the most-watched show three times in the last four weeks.

And, as in the past, ABC seems to score with almost everything it tries. Detective School, which was not even on the network's fall schedule until last week, was No. 5 in the latest ratings.

Carol Burnett, until recently a prominent member of the CBS stable, was a hit in her first appearance for ABC, as star of Carol Burnett and Friends. The show, the premiere for a four-week series, was No. 25.

ABC's rating for one week this month was 16.1, its highest since the first week in June. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 16.1 per cent of the homes in the United States with TV were tuned to ABC.

The same week, CBS was second with a rating of 14, and NBC third, at 13.5.

The rating for Three's Company was 25.9. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 25.9 per cent saw at least part of the program.

CBS had the No. 2 and No. 4 programs, WKRP in Cincinnati and *M*A*-S*H*, while NBC's best, Diff'rent Strokes, was 28th.

Two of the three network newsmagazines scored. CBS's 60 Minutes, with a segment on the dispute involving actress Vanessa Redgrave and a concentration camp survivor, was 12th, while ABC's 20-20 ranked 18th.

Canadian ballet star wows London reviewers

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Peter Schaufuss, on loan from the National Ballet of Canada, is the toast of London critics for his dancing and production of La Sylphide with the London Festival Company.

"Rarely is it possible to praise a work so wholeheartedly," writes Edward Thorpe in The Evening News.

"Yes, yes, a triumph" says Ian Woodward in The Standard.

Schaufuss, who is to rejoin the National Ballet in Montreal next month, makes his debut as a producer-director-choreographer of a major romantic work in this production.

"It is a rare pleasure to see a seminal classic of the dance theatre staged so that it seems entirely fresh (and) put into exact artistic focus by love, understanding and scrupulous care," Clement Crisp writes in The Financial Times. "Such is the happy case with . . . La Sylphide."

Schaufuss shares the raves with Eva Dvdokimova as the sylph and mime Niels Bjorn Larsen as the witch.

Mary Clarke in The Guardian points out that Schaufuss "has gone back to Danish sources for his reconstruction of this enchanting survival from the romantic era."

"He has added more music than the Danes themselves now use, inserted more dancing and distributed the dancing differently."

Python film satire 'act of blasphemy'

New York Times

NEW YORK — The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York has deplored Monty Python's Life of Brian, a film satire by the British comedy group Monty Python, as "a mockery of Christ's life."

The statement — "the first time in recent memory," according to the archdiocese, that it has publicly criticized a movie — followed by two days a statement by three rabbinical organizations condemning the movie as "a crime against religion."

Speaking for the archdiocese, Msgr. Eugene V. Clark, director of its communications office, said: "The picture holds the person of Christ up to comic ridicule and is, for Christians, an act of blasphemy. We are reaching a point in the late 20th century when the religious community must face the fact, regrettably, that the entertainment industry will not likely prevent the creation of such material. It is now the obligation of religious persons and all persons of cultivation who respect religion to recognize contemptuous antireligious sentiment of this sort and to separate themselves from it personally as a matter of principle."

Monty Python's Life of Brian tells the story of Brian of Nazareth, a reluctant messiah born on Christmas night, who joins the People's Liberation Front of Judea and is crucified by the Roman army. The film opened here Aug. 17.

A second spokesman for the archdiocese, the Rev. Kenneth Jadoff, explained that the archdiocese had had no previous occasion to speak publicly against a film, perhaps because only in recent times would such a film have been made. "We're not stuffed collars, we're very tolerant about some things, about some shades of satire on the church," said Father Jadoff. "But this is unique. This is the most blasphemous film I have ever seen and it pretends to be nothing else."

For years, movies have been rated according to moral acceptability by the film and broadcasting office of the United Catholic Conference, and the Monty Python film was rated "condemned," Jadoff said.

Nowadays, he added, the reviews accompanying the ratings are more in depth, and the attitude has changed somewhat toward Catholics who take a pledge not to see condemned films but see them anyway.

Two new hurricanes on the boil

SAN JUAN (AP) — As Hurricane David headed for the Dominican Republic today after killing at least 17 persons, two new tropical storms were on the move, one in the Gulf of Mexico and the other in mid-Atlantic.

The U.S. National Weather Service said that Storm Elena's centre was 275 kilometres southeast of Galveston, Tex., moving west-northwest at 19 kilometres an hour.

The weather service said the Atlantic storm, Frederic, had sustained top winds of 80 km-h and should develop into a hurricane today. It was located 1,800 kilometres southwest of the Cape Verde Islands and was moving west.

Meanwhile, David's centre was reported about 180 kilometres southwest of Puerto Rico and 197 kilometres southeast of Santo Domingo, the Dominican capital.

It was still moving west-northwest with maximum sustained winds of 275 km-h.

The storm has left a trail of floods and looting in its rampage through Caribbean islands, killed at least 10 people and flattened thousands of homes. A state of emergency was declared today in Puerto Rico after David passed.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said the southern portion of the Dominican Republic began feeling the first gusts of David's fury about 8 a.m. EDT. The mighty storm should march by Haiti in 24 hours, continuing its northwest trek and probably slam into Cuba, said forecaster Miles Lawrence.

Civil defense workers and police evacuated thousands of residents from low-lying areas near the Ozama River that winds through Santo Domingo. Red Cross workers in neighboring Haiti shipped relief supplies into the southern port of Jamel before roads wash out.

Dominican Republic President Antonio Guzman broadcast radio bulletins Thursday telling government workers to stay home, the Army was put on alert in its barracks and stores were packed with customers buying hurricane supplies.

Puerto Rican Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo declared a state of emergency to mobilize disaster relief for the victims of David. The governor said he ordered aides to assess the damage and the number of victims, now estimated at between 4,000 and 5,000 homeless, most of them in the southern coastal and mountain regions. Three people died Thursday in storm-related accidents.

Dollar sagging

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed on world money markets today falling against some key currencies after a week of heavy European selling pressure.

Gold, after reaching a record high of $320 an ounce on Europe's bullion Markets Thursday, opened lower in London and Zurich.

Dealers said demand was weak. Early gold dealing in London fluctuated around $317.25 an ounce. In Zurich, the metal opened at $318.50 but drifted down to $317.75 by mid-morning.

of Cuban-based "liberation movements" that could spread through Latin America, similar to such moves by the Cubans in Africa.

The state department said the troops do not pose a threat to the United States.

Carter would not say whether the Soviet Union has been asked to withdraw the troops.

Under agreements made after the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 and reaffirmed in 1970, the Soviet Union is not allowed to station "offensive weapons systems" in Cuba. In return, the U.S. has pledged not to invade the island.

But Hodding Carter said "ground forces per se did not figure in our bilateral understandings with the Soviets."

The state department made the acknowledgement after Senator Frank Church (Dem. Idaho), chairman of the Senate foreign relations Committee, reported Thursday night that U.S. intelligence sources had confirmed the presence of Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Church urged President Carter to insist on the immediate withdrawal of the Soviet troops.

In Little Rock, Ark., today, Senator Bob Dole of Kansas, a Republican presidential contender, demanded the same action and, going further, proposed suspending the Senate debate on the new U.S. strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union until the Russians provide "a full explanation."

In Havana, meanwhile, Cuba today submitted a fiercely anti-Western draft declaration to the summit meeting of non-aligned countries, refusing almost any significant concessions to moderates, delegates said.

The move has dismayed moderate countries, which had expected Cuba to tone down an initial draft issued several weeks ago in the face of a barrage of amendments from founder countries such as Egypt and Yugoslavia.

prime minister's staff said both men have agreed not to make public statements on the discussions.

Energy will also be included in talks Clark will have either Wednesday or Thursday with Premiers Angus MacLean of Prince Edward Island and Brian Peckford of Newfoundland. Clark said he probably will discuss offshore oil jurisdiction with Peckford.

Speaking at a news conference at the end of a four-day inner cabinet meeting at this Rocky Mountain resort, Clark said Lougheed and Davis are key players in arriving at any Canadian consensus on a national oil energy policy that will deal with everything from oil prices to the government aim to make Canadian self-sufficient in energy by 1990.

The two are on opposite sides of an increasingly bitter dispute over how the new Conservative federal government can fulfil its pledge to allow the price of oil to increase to world levels without the consumer provinces suffering too much.

Clark said his talks with Davis and Lougheed are exploratory and preliminary. The meetings were arranged hurriedly Thursday, a day after the 12-member inner cabinet completed discussion of an over-all federal energy policy that is to be presented to all provinces.

"I want to see in a general way what the premier of Alberta thinks will be reasonable, what the province of Ontario thinks will be reasonable, what other provinces think will be reasonable . . . then try to bring them together."

He said he is starting off on talks feeling that no province is acting in bad faith and that Ontario and Alberta want to agree on a national oil policy that is genuinely in the national interest.

The prime minister said he wants to avoid a constitutional fight with the provinces.

Earlier Thursday, the Ontario government made public an offer to buy part of Petro-Canada, the Crown-owned petroleum corporation, if the federal government will agree to keep it in public hands.

Premier Davis said Thursday in an interview that he urged the federal Conservatives in a letter in mid-July to Prime Minister Clark not to go ahead with their plan to sell the corporation.

Davis suggested that Clark discuss with the provinces the possibility that they would buy into Petro-Canada if that would help prevent its sale to private interests.

False report

A report of a holdup at the Pay-Less gas station at Admirals and Craigflower Wednesday night was false, Colwood RCMP said today.

A police spokesman said the $118 taken in the reported robbery has been recovered. Police said no charges have been laid.

Adams hopes Irish people will rise up against terrorists

'What, that Seaway fellah again!' said Mountbatten when he bumped into Adams at a Vancouver dinner

'Vicious animals should be destroyed'

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The murderers of Earl Louis Mountbatten of Burma are vicious animals and should be treated as such, says retired Canadian admiral Ken Adams of 2330 Harbor Road in Sidney.

The picture is inscribed: "To Ken Adams from an old friend."

"People who do things like this do not deserve the dignity of people. They are animals and should be destroyed like any destructive animal," Adams says.

"I'm hoping the decent people of Ireland — there must be plenty, the great silent majority — will rise up and destroy the animals in their midst."

Pausing, he adds: "I don't think I could be any madder."

Adams and Mountbatten first met in 1929 as lieutenants in HMS Victory, the Royal Navy's barracks and training establishment at Portsmouth.

In those days Royal Canadian Navy personnel relied on the RN for all but their basic training.

"He drove a very fine automobile — it was either a Rolls Royce or a Daimler. He had a silver sailor with the call-up signal in semaphore, J, on top of the radiator cap," Adams recalls.

They met again in 1930 when Adams was serving with the RN's third cruiser squadron in the Mediterranean, operating out of Malta. Mountbatten had just been given command of one of the RN's newest destroyers.

Provincial government buildings will fly their flags at half-mast from sunrise to sunset on Wednesday, the day of the state funeral in London for Earl Mountbatten of Burma.

Adams, now 76, was three years younger than Mountbatten and said he had little in common with a destroyer captain at that time.

But he and Mountbatten met frequently in the officers' club at Valetta. Mountbatten, he says, was an avid user of the Malta polo grounds.

"I knew him to be a very capable destroyer captain in the days when they used to pride themselves on their shiphandling ability," he says.

"I've forgotten how long Lord Louis served in that destroyer but he was later transferred to a ship in the China Station."

The rapport and respect between Mountbatten and his crew was so strong, Adams says, that when Mountbatten was transferred, the whole ship's company transferred with him.

"It was a tremendous gesture on the part of the crew. He was a born leader and tremendous seaman."

When he returned to Canada, Adams kept close tabs on Mountbatten's progress.

"I was always interested, especially when he was chosen at a very early age to become viceroy of India.

"He was responsible for the establishment of Pakistan. He was sailing awfully close to the wind but I had complete confidence he'd pull it off with success."

In 1953, Mountbatten again influenced Adams' life.

At that time, Adams was in Hamilton "running reserves, universities, sea cadets . . . all the odds and sods jobs."

Mountbatten was then the First Sea Lord and had decided that the days of the silent service were over and that navy men had to rely on public support for their existence.

Adams was summoned to Ottawa and told to go out and sell the navy to Canada.

"I don't know if I was so pleased with Lord Louis at that time," he says with a wry smile.

Adams and Mountbatten met again in Toronto in 1959, the year Queen Elizabeth officially opened the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Adams had retired from the navy and was working for Canadian Westinghouse.

At the request of the Canadian National Exhibition's president, he was loaned to the CNE to organize a massive gathering of naval vessels in Toronto.

"It was a matter of teaching Toronto to become a sea-port overnight. All the way along Toronto's waterfront it was nothing but ships."

Mountbatten opened the CNE, making his headquarters in one of the four RN ships that were alongside.

"He dubbed me that Seaway fellah," Adams recalls.

"Once again he showed his great understanding of people and what people were trying to do. He had great dignity, a great sense of humor and the people of Toronto just fell in love with him."

Adams was greeted with: "What, that Seaway fellah again?" when he last met Mountbatten in the 1960s in Vancouver.

Mountbatten had been asked to be guest speaker at a fund-raising dinner of the Variety Club of Western Canada.

TOWN TALK

If the enemy penetrates the Tweed Curtain, or an earthquake occurs, Oak Bay council will be ready aye ready.

The object of a bylaw to establish an emergency plan, which council will be asked to approve at its next meeting, "is to ensure the continuity of the government of the Corporation of the District of Oak Bay during emergencies."

This includes the maintenance of law and order, the saving of life, the protection of the health and welfare of the citizens and the preservation of property.

Authority to deal with emergencies is given to council and the emergency program executive committee will consist of the three aldermen making up Committee B.

At all costs.

And the first point in public information is "keep in contact with the local media."

Right on.

But the capper has to be the first item of what to do in the event of an impending or actual, natural or civil disaster.

"Investigate and confirm," is the rule

Bring on the blighters!

Auction halt asked by board

The Capital Regional Board was to ask B.C. Supreme Court today for an interim injunction stopping auctions at 2510 Happy Valley Road in Metchosin.

The board, in material filed at the Law Courts, claims that Helena Heinrich, 3504 Happy Valley, is contravening a regulation which does not allow auctions on the property.

Signs were spotted June 11 reading "Happy Valley Auction Centre--Consignment Sales — Cars, Trucks, Trailers, Rec Vehicles, Motor Homes, Tent Trailers."

The board said an auction took place on June 23.

The application for the interim injunction pending trial of the issue was to have been heard Thursday by Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan but certain preliminary objections by Ross McLarty, counsel for Mrs. Heinrich, resulted in an adjournment to today.

The regional board says B.C. regulation 20-67 lists approved uses for lands in rural zones and auctions aren't included.

McKenzie meeting called

Fraser asked to step in

Highways Minister Alex Fraser will be asked to provide a detailed explanation of the McKenzie Avenue extension route to angry area residents, Saanich Ald. Fred Severson said today.

The alderman said he wants Fraser to attend a public information meeting in Saanich council chambers within the next two weeks.

"It's time to clear the air," he said in a call to the Times.

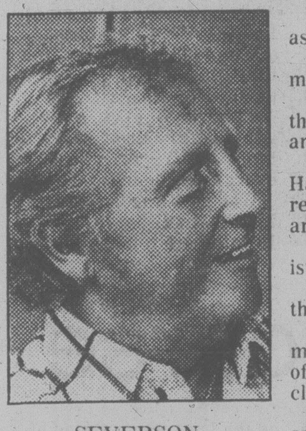
Protest letters and telephone calls convinced Severson a meeting is needed.

He said he is willing to chair the meeting, but it will be up to the highways ministry to do the talking.

Severson said he wants deputy highways minister Tom Johnston and his planners to "thrash it out" with Garden City Homeowners Association and other groups complaining about the route of the four-lane extension which will link Pat Bay and Trans-Canada highways.

Municipal planners will also be at the meeting and other members of council will be invited, he said.

Since aldermen will be attending the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention next week, the meeting will have to take place the second week in September.



SEVERSON
. . . 'clear the air'

But efforts will be made to make sure the meeting is held as quickly as possible.

"I'm getting a lot of letters and I'm sure other council members are too," Severson said.

Residents on both sides of the planned extension say they are joining forces to fight the highways ministry, and have criticized Saanich for not representing them.

Homeowners' association spokesman George Van't Haaff said Thursday the preliminary design approved recently by Saanich council doesn't have the approval of any area residents.

Attempts to get an explanation from highways ministry officials have been repeatedly brushed off, he said.

Homeowners on the west side of the extension say the move means devaluation of their property, destruction of parkland, and that blasting will take place dangerously close to a sewage holding tank.

Marigold spokesman Daniela Gauvin said the 86-unit co-op isn't satisfied with the design either and wants guarantees of a buffer zone of trees and protection against noise and pollution.

Construction starts on Gorge apartments

The property, formerly the site of the San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court, has been purchased by Litwin Construction Ltd. from 76 Developments.

The former owners, a group of local businessmen, attached a $1.6 million price-tag to the land and put it up for sale about a year ago.

Under a land-use contract negotiated with Saanich in 1976, 76 Developments was going to build six four-storey apartments, but the project was postponed because of poor housing market conditions. The contract was renewed in mid-1977 for two years.

The new owners intend to meet all conditions of the contract, which includes supplying a strip of land along the water's edge for a park, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Thursday.

Saanich will also receive a large contribution toward the Gorge trunk sewer line, he said.

A public meeting will be held so Litwin Construction can explain the development to area residents.

Student job-finder now seeking work

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

After helping to find jobs for 1,388 teen-agers this summer, Holly Weidner is looking for one for herself.

She spent the past seven months as manager of the Canada Employment Centre for Students but today it closed its doors in anticipation of Tuesday's return to school.

"I'll take a brief holiday, to rest up a bit, and then I hope to find permanent work in Victoria," she said.

She has had experience working with juvenile delinquents and handicapped people.

The student employment centre opened in May and job-seekers from UVic began to come in at the rate of 200 a day.

By June many of them were employed and then the more difficult task of placing high school students began.

"The community responded well. Employers hired as many as they could afford and then householders began phoning in for casual help. We placed 438 in casual jobs this summer, up 137 from last year."

While 3,892 of them did not get jobs instantly, most were working before the end of summer.

"We gave them counselling on how to look for work on their own, how to prepare resumes, how to dress and so on."

The long-term results were rewarding, she said.

"This month when we phoned some of these people to see if they still wanted work, most had found a job on their own."

In one case this month, she said, she pulled 25 names from the file of those who did not get jobs in June and 20 of the 25 reported they found work later in the summer.

The most consistent thing she noticed about job-seekers this summer was a seriousness of purpose.

"Everyone was eager to work and willing to dress up and prepare resumes in order to find a job."

Working with Mrs. Weidner, 25, were five undersity students hired for the summer.

One member of the summer staff was on the road every day, talking to local employers, trying to line up additional jobs. The others acted as counsellors and job-placement officers.

"As an innovation we organized private counselling areas this year," Mrs. Weidner said.

The tourist industry provided work for almost half the 1,388 students who found employment through the office. A large number of office jobs also were obtained.

Hiring was up in the private sector but there were fewer government jobs than last year.

With the closing of the centre, university students looking for work are being referred to the Canada Employment Centre office on the campus. All other young job-seekers are being referred to the main office at 810 Fort.

The student office at 2653 Douglas reverts to the Youth Employment Centre, operated by Susan Vallor, which provides job information to schools.

Net chaos sends ump to showers

John McEnroe and Ilie Nastase were standing at opposite ends of the court, hands on hips. The umpire, Frank Hammond, had just penalized Nastase a game for delaying play, but the boisterous crowd of 10,549 that came to the U.S. Open tennis championships Thursday night refused to accept that decision.

They booed and whistled and clapped and stomped their feet.

"It may not have been the wildest thing I've ever seen, but it sure was in the top 10," said McEnroe.

Finally, in an effort to get play resumed, tournament referee Mike Blanchard instructed Nastase to serve. At that point McEnroe led 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 3-1, but not according to the crowd.

They roared "2-1, 2-1, 2-1," demanding that the penalty assessed against Nastase be reversed.

"I thought if play could resume, the crowd would quiet down," said Blanchard, explaining why he ordered Nastase to serve despite the roar of the crowd.

And that's what Hammnond did.

"Game, set and match, Mr. McEnroe," he bellowed into the microphone.

The crowd continued to roar. The players stood and stared in disbelief.

"It was obvious the match wasn't going to be over," said McEnroe. "They would have lynched him (Hammond)."

Instead, they replaced him. Billy Talbert, the tournament director, instructed Hammond to leave the chair. The stocky umpired clambered down and was replaced by Blanchard.

Before the big eruption, Hammond had given McEnroe an extra serve because Nastase was clowning around, and penalized Nastase a point because he was delaying play.

"I thought I was extremently lenient in working within the rules," said Hammond. "It was the worst moment of my life. I've never seen anything like it."

Somewhere in the confusion, Hammond's announcement that the match was over was reversed. Play eventually resumed, after a delay of some 15 minutes, and the third-seeded McEnroe soon wrapped up a 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory.

Afterward, he said he bore no ill feelings toward Nastase.

"You hate him on the court, but five minutes later you get over it," McEnroe said. "And it's easier when you win. He actually was on pretty good behavior, I thought."

In today's featured action, defending champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 2 seed, plays Vijay Amritraj of India while No. 5 Roscoe Tanner takes on Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia. In another night match, 16-year-old Tracy Austin, the No. 3 women's seed, meets 14-year-old Andrea Jaeger.

The highlight of Thursday's afternoon program came when 14-year-old Kathy Horvath became the youngest player ever to compete in the main draw of the Open.

Only five days after her 14th birthday, she put up a stiff fight for one set against sixth-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia before bowing 7-6, 6-2.

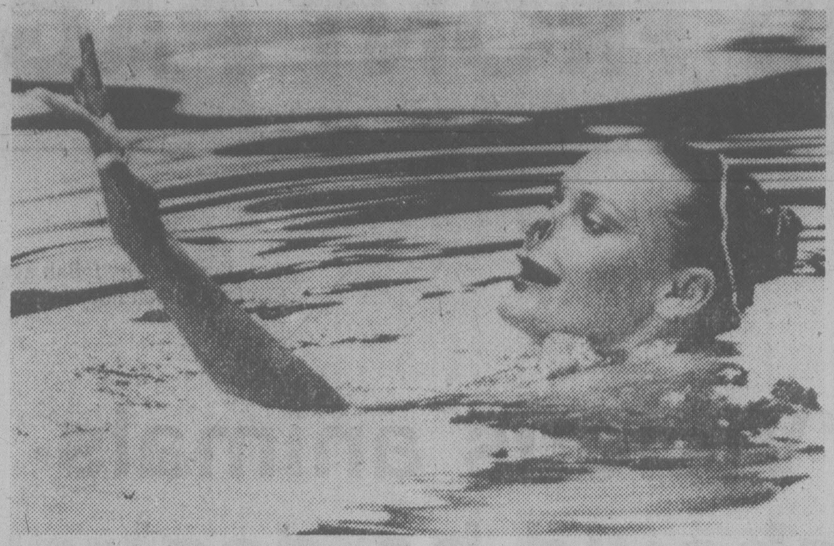
Horvath is 2 1-2 months younger than Jaeger, who plays today, and eight months younger than Austin was when she played here two years ago.

Bjorn Borg, the No. 1 men's seed, clobbered David Carter of Australia 6-1, 6-1, 6-1 and said he felt "very comfortable."

Fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis got past Ferdi Taygan 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 and No. 5 Tanner trounced John Marks of Australia, 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

In women's play, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, seeking her fifth straight title, breezed past Joanne Russell 6-0, 6-2 and will next face transsexual Renee Richards, a 6-2, 2-6, 6-4 victor over Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa.

In other matches, No. 2 Martina Navratilova, the Wimbledon queen, beat Alycia Moulton 6-4, 6-0, No. 3 Austin clobbered Ivanna Madruga of Argentina 6-3, 6-1, No. 4 Virgina Wade of Britain coasted past Janet Newberry 6-3, 6-2 and No. 5 Evonne Goolagong outlasted Kay McDaniel, 6-7, 6-4, 6-4.



EN ROUTE to solo title at inaugural World Cup synchronized swimming championships at Tokyo's Yoyogi Pool is Helen Vanderburg, 20, who also shared the duet crown with 18-year-old Kelly Kryczka. Both are members of Calgary Aquabelles, which took the bronze medal behind the winning United States and second-place Japan in the team event. Vanderburg now has won solo and duet titles in three consecutive major international meets. (AP Wirephoto).

Newfoundland weather interupts softball play

Times News Services

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — Defending-champion Victoria Budgets, the British Columbia representatives, and Ontario remained the only undefeated teams after three days of play at the Canadian senior "A" men's softball championships.

Both have 3-0 records and lead their respective divisions in preliminary round-robin play.

After beating New Brunswick 2-0 Thursday, Budgets were scheduled to face Placentia of Newfoundland in an evening game but a rainstorm intervened.

Another game between Quebec and St. John's was also postponed by the rain.

In other Thursday games, Quebec downed Saskatchewan 1-0, Manitoba blanked Nova Scotia 3-0 and New Brunswick beat Northwest Territories, 7-2.

The top eight teams in the round-robin action advance to the championship round with the first four allowed two losses and the next four allowed only one in the playdowns.

Stretch drive to stay alive

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Year two is over for the Victoria Mussels, at least on the playing field, but behind the scenes they're in the stretch drive to determine if year three will materilalize.

Mussels, who brought professional baseball back to Victoria in 1978, completed their '79 season in the class "A" Northwest League on a winning note Thursday afternoon at Royal Athletic Park by beating Grays Harbor Mets 5-1.

The game had little meaning for either team as Walla Walla Padres clinched the northern division championship Wednesday night and now meet Central Oregon Phillies, the southern division pennant winners, in a best-of-three playoff starting Saturday in Bend.

Crucial to the Mussels at this stage, however, are negotiations for a change of ownership. Jim and Lynn Chapman have decided to bail out after the team lost a rumored $40,000 over two years.

They're ready to hand over the franchise to anyone willing to assume the debts and are talking to a group of about 10 Victoria candidates which reportedly includes land developer Bob Peden.

The Chapmans would prefer to remain with the club in a managerial capacity and hope to close the deal within a month.

Attendance remained spotty this season despite Mussels' pennant run and a flying finish in which they won 24 of their last 36 games under manager Bill Bryk.

Also crucial to Mussels' survival would be an affiliation with a major league team. Victoria operated both years as an independent.

Los Angeles Dodgers have provided limited player help. One story is that the Dodgers aren't happy with their Lethbridge operation in the class "A" rookie Pioneer League and might be interested in a move here if the operation suits them, but that's pure conjecture.

Another rumor, one with more credence, is that the New York Mets will pull out of Grays Harbor after a season of poor weather, a last-place finish and a belly-flop at the box office. No one knows at this point where the Mets would move, or even if they'd be back in the league.

Van Schley, the California resident who started the season paying the Mussels' salaries and finished up bankrolling much of the operation, doesn't plan to be back. He wants to operate his own minor league club and is looking at Corvallis and Albany, Ore., as possible Northwest League entries next year.

What about Victoria?

"If conditions are right I'd think about it," he said Thursday, "but they have other people here who want to operate the club."

Schley said the league is still interested in Victoria, even under new ownership, "but they'd want to scrutinize the operation here very closely."

And he had a word of caution for any new owners.

"They will have to be very careful about where they get a PDC (player development contract or major league affiliation)."

Grays Harbor's experience with the Mets this year is a graphic example of what Schley means. It was a disaster.

Righthander Tom Candiotti posted his fifth win Thursday on an eight-hitter before yielding to reliever Roy Moretti in the ninth. Moretti, a free agent after his contract with Toronto Blue Jays expired with Mussels' final game, gave up a leadoff double, then struck out the side.

Mussels clinched it with a three-run outburst in the fifth, touched off by Doug Morganti's ninth home run of the season.

Royals pass Angels so Brett is set to bet

By Canadian Press

Kansas City's George Brett knows when he sees something good — like himself and the rest of the front-running Royals.

"If I was a betting man, I'd put my money on myself," Brett said Thursday night after the Royals overtook the fading California Angels in the American League West, grabbing a one-half game lead, the first time they've been in first place since June 28.

While the Angels were losing 7-1 in Cleveland, the Royals were rolling to an 8-3 victory over New York Yankees.

"I think there were doubts in our minds, but we weren't going to throw in the towel," Brett said. "The Yankees did it last year. We can do it, too."

Elsewhere in the AL, Baltimore Orioles shaded Minnesota Twins 5-4, Texas Tangers blanked Boston Red Sox 6-0, Detroit Tigers edged Oakland A's 8-7, Seattle Mariners trounced Toronto 8-2 and Milwaukee beat Chicago 4-3 in 12 innings.

In the National League, San Francisco Giants held a pre-game meeting and it certainly didn't hurt.

"Maybe we're back on the right track — we've got to start playing baseball and stop worrying about other things," said manager Joe Altobelli.

That was the theme of the meeting held before the Giants went out and played the game well, beating St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2.

Willie McCovey's tie-breaking pinch-hit single in the seventh inning and a four-hitter by Ed Whitson, 6-8, helped the Giants forget some of their recent troubles on and off the field.

The Giants had lost 11 of 13 games before Thursday.

In the only other National League contest, Chiacgo Cubs topped Los Angeles Dodgers, 4-1. Larry Biittner tripled in a pair of first-inning runs and three Cub pitchers combined on a six-hitter. Dennis Lamp notched his 10th victory in 17 decisions while Bruce Sutter picked up his 35th save.

Humbling course

WOODBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Lee Trevino says there isn't an easy hole at the National Golf Club.

"You can't relax at any time," said Trevino, who scored birdies on his last four holes for a four-under-par 67 Thursday and the first-round lead in the $100,000 Labatt's International golf tournament.

More than 140 competitors started the 72-hole tournament in sunny weather but only five broke par on the 6,975-yard course, politely called tough and long by a number of the players but tagged as evil by some members of the private club.

Entering today's second round, with $20,000 the prize for the winner, Trevino took a two-stroke lead over Jim Nelford of Burnaby, Bob Rose of Hamilton and Peter Townsend of England.

The tournament, originally a closed event for members of the Canadian PGA, became an international competition in 1978 at Vancouver.

For most of the Canadian club pros and a number of invited professionals, it was generally a disastrous day.

One of the toughest holes was the 12th, a snakey par-five 503-yarder which yielded a couple of 10s and one 11. However, David Richardson of Richmond Hill, Ont., had an eagle on the hole, but he wound up with an 80.

Trevino, with career earnings of more than $2 million on the PGA tour, started his brilliant putting display on the 15th with a successful 18-footer on the par-three, 221-yard hole. He made a three-foot birdie putt on the 16th and 17th holes, then sank a 15-footer for a birdie on the par-four, 441-yard 18th.

Strange on top

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Curtis Strange, a former United States collegiate champion making the adjustment to the Professional Golfers' Association tour in his third year as a pro, carried a one-stroke lead into today's second round of the $275,000 B.C. Open golf tournament.

Although Strange is already assured of an exemption from having to qualify for next year's tour because he is guaranteed a spot in the top 60 on the 1979 PGA money list, he is still shooting for his first pro championship.

His biggest challenger in Thursday's first round was Allan Tapie, a golfer who is struggling to stay on the tour.

Red Oaks to face Irish

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough Red Oaks defeated Brampton Excelsiors 15-8 Thursday to win their best-of-seven Ontario Lacrosse Association final 4-1.

The Oaks now will try to accomplish what no other lacrosse team from eastern Canada has done in the last 25 years — win the Mann Cup championship in the West.

Peterborough will face Victoria Shamrocks in a best-of-seven series which starts Tuesday in Victoria's Memorial Arena. The Oaks defeated the Shamrocks in seven games in the Canadian final in Peterborough last year.

"It will be a lot tougher this year trying to win in the West because Victoria will have the home floor and the crowd," said Oaks coach Ben Floyd. "Last year what we did was unexpected, this year they will be looking for us. We are the defending Canadian champs."

J. J. Johnston and Jim Wasson led the Oaks with three goals each. Tim Hargreaves and Larry Ferguson each fired two while singles went to John Grant, Peter Guerin, Jan Magee, Scott MacLean and Jim Johnston.

Peterborough had little difficulty with Brampton, leading 5-0 after the first period and 10-5 after two. They outshot the visitors 54-46, including 22-10 in the first period.

"One thing we can't do is get down early," said Wasson, the Oaks captain. "Since Victoria will be playing at home they will be high on emotion. It'll be important for us to get off to a good start but I'm confident we can do it."

Pink limits, huge tyee yield plenty of action

Limit catches of pink salmon off the southern end of Vancouver Island and some monster chinooks from Campbell River highlighted the sports fishing scene this week.

Sooke fishermen are landing numerous pinks to 11 pounds and a few coho in the same size range off Secretary Island.

A few coho to 10 pounds, the odd sockeye and a number of chinooks topped by a 38½-pounder boated last Friday by Jerry Day on an anchovy round out the catch.

Ken Petch landed a 35-pound chinook Wednesday in Race Passage for the heaviest fish of the week at Pedder Bay but pinks to nine pounds are providing most of the action.

Best spots have been between the race and Church Rock using strip or pink hootchies. A few coho are also showing.

Numerous pinks to seven pounds and chinooks to 30 are mixed with a few coho to 10 off Trial Island and Chain Flats at Oak Bay. Top results were noted on strip or pink hootchies.

Action has been fairly slow at Deep Cove but started to pick up Wednesday with coho to nine pounds and fair numbers of chinooks to five grabbing Buzz Bombs off Wain Rock and Mill Bay.

The stretch of water between Bamberton and Sheppard Point is yielding chinooks to 12 pounds on hootchies, strip and plugs and a few coho are showing off Sandy Beach and Coles Bay.

Larger but "black" Cowichan Bay chinooks to 30 pounds have turned up in McKenzie Bay.

Coho returns have slowed somewhat but some to 13 pounds continue to come in from deep waters.

Action has also picked up off Nanaimo with chinooks to 35 pounds showing off Hudson Rock (top choice), Five Fingers, the white marker off Hammond Bay, Dodd's Narrows and the red buoy off Snake Island.

There's also a run of coho to 11 pounds near the Fingers.

Commerical fishing activity in Alberni Inlet is hampering sports returns and moochers have to work for catches of coho to six pounds off Hornby Island.

Waters off Campbell River have started to produce some monster salmon.

San Francisco visitor Chuck De Kay managed to land a 63½-pounder in Tyee Pool using a fly rod and 15-pound test line.

Other good tyee catches and coho to 13 pounds were reported by moochers and trollers using cut plug herring or wooden Lyman plugs in the same spots as well as off the Argonaut Wharf, Big Rock, Dolphins and Cape Mudge.

Trout fishermen can expect better catches as the Island lakes start to cool down.

NIBBLES: Grouse hunting season opens Saturday on most of Vancouver Island and the access picture looks good . . . Most logging company gates, even those closed during the dry spell, are expected to be open this weekend.

Cueller's late goal does it for Sockers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Midfielder Leonardo Cuellar scored with 1:10 remaining to lift San Diego Sockers to a 2-1 victory Thursday over Tampa Bay Rowdies in their opening North American Soccer League semi-final playoff series.

The deciding goal came from 10 yards out after a give-and-go pass from Hugo Sanchez, who earned the assist after taking the ball from Peter Nover.

Wieczorkowski went scoreless through 25 regular season games.

After being shut out in the first half, Tampa Bay took to the attack and tied the game at 74:45 on a short header by Wes McLeod after a delicate pass from Manny Andruszewski.

The second game will be played in Tampa Bay on Saturday. If Rowdies win, the series will be decided by a 30-minute mini-game immediately following.

Tampa Bay's Peter Anderson and Martin Donnelly of San Diego were ejected at 61:08 for fighting as tempers flared in the second half.

Pittsburgh deals Herron to Habs

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens have acquired goaltender Denis Herron, a 27-year-old native of Chambly, Que., from Pittsburgh Penguins in exchange for utility forward Pat Hughes, minor league netminder Robert Holland and future considerations, the National Hockey League club announced Thursday.

Herron, an NHL regular for the last five seasons — two with Kansas City and the last three with Pittsburgh, appeared in 56 games for the Penguins last season and had a 3.37 goals-against average.

The trade was precipitated by the retirement last month of all-star goalie Ken Dryden, a situation which left Michel Larocque as the defending Stanley Cup champion's only NHL-tested netminder.

Hughes appeared in 41 regular-season games with the Canadiens last season and scored nine goals and assisted on eight others. His playoff output in eight appearances was one goal and two assists.

Herron, a personal friend of Larocque, has appeared in more than 55 games in three of his five seasons in the NHL. He played in 64 games in 1975-76 while with Kansas City and wound up with a 4.03 goals-against mark.

Retractable roof ready for baseball

MONTREAL (CP) — The Olympic Stadium's retractable roof will be ready for the opening of the 1981 National League baseball season, a full three months ahead of schedule, consulting engineer Jacques Proulx has reported.

Creed, a mother of six and grandmother of 12, fired a last-round 77 for a 36-hole total of 163, which also helped pace Ontario to a win in the team competition.

Ann Robertson of Montreal finished second.

Ontario, which also included Kay Helleur, Jan Vining and Ollie Hyndiuk, scored 498, with the best three scores of the two rounds used to determine the team winner. British Columbia was second with a 512 overall and Manitoba third with 527.

The win was an unexpected one for Creed, who entered with the lowest handicap in the division for women over 50.

Boat festival boasts links with Goering, Spike Africa

You don't have to be a racing type or even a boater to appreciate the second annual classic boat festival spectacular that will take place in the Inner Harbor this weekend.

The festival is jointly sponsored by the Victoria Gaffers and the Victoria Real Estate Board. The board's Jim Russell reports 111 sail and power boats registered as of Wednesday with others still to come.

One of the most recent entries is the Los Angeles-based 65-foot topsail schooner Spike Africa, named for the old sea dog who's enthralled thousands in Seattle and Port Townsend with his tall tales, always well spiked with crusty humor.

Last year's over-all winner, Judge Ward Wilson's cutter Chantey of Bellingham will be back. She was designed and built by Hernie Dole, who sold her when he designed and built the Katie Ford, presently owned by Ian and Gillian Stewart of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Another boat bound to attract a lot of attention is the Groote Beer, a 38-ton Dutch North Sea Botterjacht, commissioned by Hermann Goering in 1938. Deliberate delays by craftsmen assigned to work on her postponed her launching until 1948, two years after Goering had committed suicide in an Allied prison.

She was bought by Stuart Anderson, owner of the Black Angus restaurant chain, in 1977 and donated to the Boy Scouts of America. Her home port now is Seattle.

Other interesting boats will include Angua Matthews' Dorothy, which was sailing in the Inner Harbor in the 1890s; the Bremerton-based yawl Uwhilna, which was built in Shanghai in 1909, and Peter-Thor Watson's Danish North Sea fishing vessel Providence, built in 1903.

* * *

To be eligible, power boats must be of pre-1950 vintage. Among those taking part will be Blayney Scott's Messenger III, that once earned her keep as a mission ship in our waters; the 50-foot Kiyi from Bainbridge Island, which was built on Lake Union in 1926, and a former United States navy captain's gig built in 1918 in New York, the S.S. Island Queen from Friday Harbor.

The navy's ketch HMCS Oriole will tie up in front of the Causeway at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Her skipper, Lt.-Cmdr. Bill Walker and his crew will be on hand when Oriole is open to the public on Saturday and Sunday. She will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to noon, 1 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. on Saturday and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Local sailmaker Ron Mack, who had his own loft on Yates Street until recently, will give a display of tools, techniques and expertise on the Causeway for most of Saturday afternoon. Ron erved his apprenticeship in the English port of Plymouth, which is also my old home town.

Oriole will be positioned off the Ogden Point breakwater for Sunday's sailpast, which takes place between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Aboard Oriole, the fleet will be reviewed by Ned Ashe, who is honorary commodore for both the festival and RVYC. Ned, who has been a member of Victoria's sailing fraternity for almost 70 years, still enjoys sailing his sloop Mint. His father was G.P. Ashe, who became the first Canadian to enter the Trans-Pac in 1912 when he was RVYC's vice-commodore.

Also aboard Oriole will be the six judges who will pick the winners of the sail and power fleets. Humphrey Golby, known as Mr. Swiftsure to hundreds of Victorians; boat designer and builder Frank Fredette, who is still plying his craft although in his eighties, and Sidney boat builder Bent Jesperson will judge the sail entries. Power boat judges will be Jim Dryburgh, Tony Skidmore and Geoff Simpson.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Associatiom, like other clubs in our area, has kept its racing calendar clear this weekend so that members can have a chance to take part in the Maple Bay Yacht Club's highly popular Labor Day weekend regatta.

There was plenty of activity at Esquimalt last weekend, however. There was a good turnout for the squadron's annual invitational single-handed race on Saturday, which was won by Ron Jewula in Beowulf. Runners-up were Bobby Haines in Barracutta and Eddie Haines in Lotte.

On Sunday the squadron's Sailerettes had their Round Robin series. Doug Bond with the Red Start crew won the series. In second place was Larry Restall with the Silver Heron crew. Third place winners were Glen Shippam and the crew from the Golden Gull.

Canadian oarsmen in three semi-finals

BLED, Yugoslavia (AP-Reuter) — Favorites East Germany, the Soviet Union and Bulgaria confirmed their claims for medals during heats of six women's events at the world rowing championships Thursday.

Eight of the 131 crews involved in men's lightweight and women's preliminary heats went straight into the finals. They were East Germany and Poland in women's coxless pairs, Bulgaria and East Germany in women's quadruple sculls, the Soviet Union and the United States in women's eights and Spain and the U.S. in men's lightweight eights.

Canadians advanced to semi-finals in three events — women's eights, men's lightweight single sculls and women's coxed four.

Canadians advancing in Thursday's heats included single sculler Brian Thorne of St. Catharines, Ont., and the women's coxed four of Iona Mahtab of St. Catharines, Betty Craig of Brockville, Ont., Monika Draeger of Niagara Falls, Ont., stroke Katie Parker of Victoria and cox Ilona Smith of Vancouver.

Thorne placed second in his elimination heat.

The Canadian women's coxed four were second in their heat behind a Romanian boat, clocking 3:26.05 for the 1,000 metres. The Romanian boat won in 3:21.24.

The Canadian women's eight qualified for the semi-finals by posting a time of 3:02.12, good for second place in one heat behind the U.S. which clocked 2:57.19. Britain and West Germany were third and fourth.

The Canadian entry in the lightweight coxless fours placed last in its heat and will get a second chance to qualify in the repechages today. The Canadians — Bill and Jim Earle of Brockville and Ottawa oarsmen Jim Smith and Dan Charlton — placed behind British, West German and Danish boats in their heat.

Also going to the repechages, after finishing last in their heats, were Janice Mason and Lisa Roy of Victoria in the double sculls, and Joy Fera of Vancouver and Heather Clark of Woodstock, Ont., in the coxless pair.

OTIS RETIRES

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Otis, the most prolific running back in St. Louis Cardinals' history, has announced his retirement. Otis, 31, holds six Cardinal rushing records, including most yards gained (3.863) and most attempts (1,011).

Everton acquires Hartford

LONDON (AP) — Asa Hartford, Scottish international soccer star, moved from Nottingham Forest to Everton in his second million-dollar transfer deal.

Nottingham bought him from Manchester City for a million dollars in June. But after playing Hartford in only three games, Forest manager Brian Clough decided he did not fit in with the team.

Cubs acquire a catcher

Kimm, who played in 106 games with Evansville of the American Association this season, was to report to the Cubs Thursday.

Johnson helps Builders take 2-1 lead in series

Capital Builders grabbed a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five Heywood Men's Softball League playoff final by downing Victoria Athletics 3-1 Thursday night at Heywood Avenue Park.

Ross Johnson earned the pitching decision with a four-hitter. He walked none and missed a shutout when Duane Robinson smashed a run-producing single in the first inning.

John Coccioloni led off the fifth inning for Capital with a home run and Gary Simpson doubled in Al Goldade for another run in the same frame.

Simpson also doubled and scored in the fourth.

The fourth game of the series is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and the fifth, if necessary, will be played Wednesday.

Two other Athletic players also claimed awards. Nick Nicholas, who had a 7-2 record and a 2.32 earned-run average, was named the top pitcher and Robinson was honored for the most homers (10) and most RBIs (30).

Matt Pavelich added to supervising staff

TORONTO (CP) — Matt Pavelich, who officiated in more games, including playoffs, than anyone else in National Hockey League history, has been named a supervisor of officials.

Pavelich, a 45-year-old native of Park Hill Gold Mines, Ont., was an official for 23 seasons in the NHL. He was a linesman for 1,723 league games and a record 220 Stanley Cup playoff games.

His total 1,957 games is 15 more than the total recorded by now-retired Neil Armstrong of Sarnia.

The appointment of Pavelich is effective Sept. 1. His specific responsibility will be the supervision and development of referees working in the American and Central Leagues.

CAMRA title race slated for Western

Car racing fans on the southern end of Vancouver Island are in for a rare treat this weekend.

Western Speedway will play host to the 17th annual Canadian-American Modified Racing Association championship Saturday and Sunday.

A full slate of racing for super-modifieds and sprint cars is scheduled each day with time trials scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Two drivers — Jerry Vantreight and Larry Pollard — will carry Victoria hopes in fray this weekend.

Vantreight, currently running tenth on the CAMRA trail in his roadster, won the circuit's Strawberry Cup race July 28 at Western.

Following that race, he towed up to Nanaimo, where he swept the trophy dash, heat race and feature event.

The engine block in his machine cracked during the race but Jerry has subsequently borrowed an engine from his cousin Geoff Vantreight's racing stable.

And, since regular-driver Roy Smith has to fulfil NASCAR commitments this weekend, Geoff has offered the Daffodil Special to super-stock pilot Pollard.

A total field of around 35 cars is expected to compete for the $10,000 purse and championship laurels.

Among the out-of-town notables entered are Doug Larsen of Quesnel, the CAMRA champion in 1975, '77 and '78 and current leader on the circuit; Blaine Sneva of Spokane, who won the 1978 Daffodil Cup at Western; Kenny Hamilton of Boise, Idaho, an experienced driver; "Wild Bill" Madsen of Salt Lake City, who has won many championship races over the years; and the Naylor family of Boise — father Glen, and sons Bob and Tom — who are all leading contenders.

Two Nanaimo drivers, Ken Svendson and Ken Kennedy, are also expected to compete.

Doug Larsen, Quesnel	1,171
Marty White, Kamloops	626
Pat Jessmore, Winthrop, Wash.	573
Rebel Jackson, Tacoma	550
Jack Cross, Langley	535
Ken Hamilton, Boise	518
Gary Miller, Calgary	388
G. Robertson, Rosalia, Wash.	355
Loyd Eby, Calgary	348
Jerry Vantreight, Victoria	329

Ticats won't appeal ruling in Bone case

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats will not appeal an Ontario Human Rights Commission ruling that granted quarterback Jamie Bone a new tryout with the Canadian Football League club.

Ralph Sazio, Ticats' vice-president and general manager, in announcing the decision, said he wanted to emphasize that the club was acting in the belief that the commission ruling did not alter the status of the league's rule on import players.

It was the import rule which Bone was seeking to change when he took his case to the commission. But commission chairman John McCamus, in announcing a decision earlier this month, did not find fault with the league rule.

Bone has since said he will not accept a new tryout with the Ticats, and will continue his fight against the CFL rules by taking the case to the Canadian Human Rights Commission.

"There's no point in trying out while the rule is still there because it's impossible to be given a fair opportunity . . . and that's all I've been asking for all along."

Sazio said Thursday that his club's decision not to appeal came after consultation with executives of the other eight CFL clubs. He said Bone would be invited to try out with the club and the normal five-day CFL trial would be extended to 31 days for Bone.

Bone, 23, a former standout at University of Western Ontario, contended that the Ticats discriminated against him because he was a Canadian quarterback. He was released after the 1978 training camp by then head coach Tom Dimitroff, who kept American quarterbacks Jimmy Jones and Tom Shuman on the roster.

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Lee Mazzilli of New York Mets has signed an extention of his major league baseball contract through to 1984.

Ontario captures junior team title

WINNIPEG (CP) — Playing better than his expectations, Rob Tod of Winnipeg took a one-shot lead into the third round today of the Canadian junior men's golf championship.

Tod, 17, fashioned a one-over-par 73 Thursday for a 36-hole total of 143, just ahead of first-round leader Rick Sepp of Mount Hope, Ont. Sepp, who had an opening round of 70, slipped to 76 Thursday for a two-round total of 146, two over par.

Tod said he originally had set his sights on shooting consistent 75s, which probably would be good enough to get him into the top 10 finishers. Instead, he's leading the pack.

Sepp's two rounds were good enough to pace Ontario to victory in the inter-provincial junior team championship, beating runner-up British Columbia by five strokes and third-place Manitoba by 13. Tod got the individual gold medal for having the lead after the team rounds.

Rick Gibson, a former Victorian now living in Vancouver, fired a 73 for a two-round total of 149 and climbed into third place, four strokes off Tod's pace. Three golfers are tied for fourth place at 151 — Danny Mijovic of Unionville, Ont., Keith Westover of Vancouver and Kevin Kelly of Mount Hope, Ont.

Of the original field of more than 190 players, 81 — including 22 juveniles — made the half-way cut of 161, earning the right to play in the final two rounds.

Bulaich returns to Miami Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — Norm Bulaich, acquired by Miami Dolphins in 1975 to replace Larry Csonka, has been brought out of retirement to serve as Csonka's backup with the National Football League team.

Coach Don Shula, wanting a veteran fullback familiar with the Dolphins' system, asked the 32-year-old Bulaich to come back after trading young fullback Leroy Harris to Philadelphia Eagles on Monday. Bulaich signed Tuesday.

NOTE: THE LINEAR SOUND OF EPI

EPI builds each model to utilize sound engineering principles that will stand up over the years. Flat Amplitude — that is, the speaker should produce no more or no less sound than is put into it. Good Dispersion—the ability to radiate sound evenly in all directions so as to fill up the entire listening area. Transient Response—the speaker's ability to reproduce dramatic changes in the sound level produced by the sound source, accurately and with a minimum of time delay. Low Distortion—a speaker system should do nothing to reinforce harmonics when they are present in a musical sound or create them when they are not. Wide bandwidth—the greater the bandwidth, the more low and high frequency information the system is capable of reproducing. By concentrating on these fundamental principles of sound EPI gets sound reproduction that is total, accurate and linear. Result: The Linear sound of EPI.

EPI 100 ONLY 99⁹⁵ ea.

The EPI 100 has become the industry standard for bookshelf loudspeakers. Leading consumer and audiophile publications have consistently given the EPI 100 their top ratings. It does everything you want a loudspeaker to do, and it does it all in a compact cabinet! The EPI 100 offers EPI's celebrated Linear Sound: a pure, uncoloured, natural sound from top to bottom. With no artificial boosting of the bass to impress the innocent. And all the nuances at the treble end that, on most speakers, just fade away. The Model 100 doesn't just deliver the Linear sound of speakers' off-axis dispersion is down an average of only 3db. And, unlike nearly every other speaker, you can listen for hours to the EPI 100 without suffering listening fatigue. The reason is EPI's "minimum distortion" — both harmonic and intermodulation. With its excellent dispersion and EPI's Linear Sound, we'd say the EPI 100 is clearly the finest speaker you can get for the money.

Before the judge

A youth celebrating his 19th birthday Thursday was fined in provincial court on one charge and then denied bail on another.

Robert Dudman of Nanaimo appeared in the morning before Judge William Ostler, jointly charged with his 17-year-old stepbrother, Darynn Brian Curson, also of Nanaimo, with theft over $200 and possession of stolen mag wheels and tires.

Dudman pleaded guilty to the theft charge while Curson was eventually released on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 and remanded until next Thursday for election of his trial method.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Gary Alexander Wilkinson, 2533 Dowler, reported wheels and tires missing off his vehicle Wednesday morning.

Victoria police went to another apartment at 2533 Dowler where Dudman and another youth were located. They went to a vehicle where the wheels and tires, valued at $350, were found in the trunk.

A witness told police of seeing two youths jacking up the vehicle that morning.

Dudman was fined $400 and placed on six months probation.

However, it was determined later that Dudman was on his own recognizance in connection with three other charges and he was arrested and reappeared in court in the afternoon.

Following a bail hearing, Dudman was remanded in custody.

Morris Jonathan Johnny, 26, of Port Hardy, pleaded guilty to a June 11 break-in and was sentenced to 14 months in jail.

Law told the court Johnny broke into a trailer in a Canadian National Railway freightyard and stole a military rifle as well as binoculars, tools, and a hacksaw. Law said the rifle was recovered in some woods near where Johnny was residing.

He also said Johnny was sentenced to a year in jail recently in Nanaimo for breaking and entering.

Defence lawyer James Main said his client had an alcohol problem. He said Johnny didn't realize what was in a wooden case until he opened it and saw the rifle. He then hid it nearby.

Ostler said he would recommend Johnny for the Alouette River unit for the treatment of alcoholism.

'Insider' broke out

A 22-year-old city man has been charged with breaking out of downtown restaurant and stealing a case of beer.

A city police spokesman said the man concealed himself inside the Old Victoria Fish and Chips, 1316 Broad, after the restaurant closed Thursday night.

A passer-by called police at 9 p.m. after he saw the suspect smash a front glass window and emerge from the building with a case of beer under his arms.

Officers captured him a short distance away.

Decision later in travel suit case

Judge D.K. McAdam reserved judgment Thursday on a damage suit against a Victoria travel agency over a 1978 tour of Spain.

Two days of testimony were completed in Edith Muir's suit against Traveleyden Tours Ltd., 768 Fort, which asked for $1,000 general damages and $14 court costs.

The case, which began June 14 in the Victoria provincial court's small claims division, was adjourned by McAdam until Sept. 21 when he is expected to hand down his decision.

Mrs. Muir claims deception on the part of the travel agency in newspaper advertisements describing a special historical art tour of Spain and misrepresentation in the quality of the tour. She said she paid $1,801 for the tour and saw only 26 of the 62 historical monuments and sites on the itinerary.

She is believed to be the first of 13 seeking damages for "frustration, distress and lack of enjoyment" brought on by the tour, which was under the auspices of the Women's Committee of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Most of Thursday's evidence was given by Mario Luna, a former University of Victoria lecturer on art history who also went on the trip.

Called to the witness stand by Traveleyden's lawyer, Harold Turnham, Luna said he had been initially asked several years ago by the women's committee to prepare a Mexican tour. At the time, Luna said, there was unrest there and he suggested a Spanish tour instead.

The initial plan, he said, was to have about 60 on the tour but due to strife within the group, the number was brought down to 30.

Luna said he agreed to be a lecturer on the tour on the assurance he would be in charge.

But things didn't work out that way, he said, and he finally realized in Madrid that he did not have the control promised.

He said he felt shame and tremendous embarrassment over the situation and even offered to make good on his return ticket. He said he was so alarmed and upset at the constant changes in the itinerary he suffered migraine headaches.

In his final argument, Turnham said Traveleyden was not a company engaged in the business of selling package tours but was merely an agent. He said Muir had misconceived the role of Traveleyden, making them the "insurer that a good time be had by all."

Traveleyden had never held themselves out as anything other than an agent, not the supplier of the services. Turnham said the firm took all reasonable steps and care to supply what was wanted.

The travel agency had exercised all concern, diligence and care short of going on the tour.

The trip seemed to have been "born under an unlucky star right from the outset," Turnham said, and the disgruntled travellers had to have a target for their frustrations and agent Peter Lowe was it.

Turnham said Lowe was not the author of the trip — that the women's committee set the itinerary — but did his best to produce it.

Elizabeth Forbes

When the Victoria Stroke Club was activated last January, John Stewart said he would have nothing to do with it.

Anxious as he was to make his way back to health after a stroke, he couldn't see how joining a club would help.

Finally he consented to attend one club meeting. Just one.

Contrary to his preconceived belief, Stewart discovered he could benefit from counselling and help in such surroundings, and he became so enthusiastic he attended every meeting until the club took a summer break in June.

Right now, because of a hip injury, he is again in hospital. But if he can make it he's going to be at the first meeting of the fall and winter season next week.

Stewart's enthusiasm is shared by all stroke victims who regularly attend meetings.

It is also shared by supportive spouses, both men and women, like Esther Stewart.

She is sure the club has a therapeutic value for people struggling to regain a normal way of life.

"Often it is the only outing they have to look forward to from week to week," she says. "It gets them in touch with their peers."

At the same time she points out "it is also of great help to the spouse, who is often just as much housebound as the stroke victim."

Victoria Stroke Club, one of 12 or 14 throughout British Columbia, is based on a similar effort back in 1974 that didn't get off the ground because of insufficient backing.

This time it was established with help of a consultant, provided for a three-month period by the Stroke Association of B.C.

The turtle was adopted for its logo and the quote "the voice of the turtle is heard in the land" as a motto.

In other words, as Esther Stewart translates "slow but sure".

Its objectives are to provide the opportunity for people who have had a stroke to help each other; maintain regular exercise so the benefits derived in rehabilitation programs are not lost; offer counselling in nutrition, occupational therapy, stroke-oriented problems and family relations and to give assistance and relief to the care-taking persons with constructive recreation and socialization for both.

Meetings will start, after the summer break, Sept. 7 and continue every Friday from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in First United Church Hall, Balmoral Road, for the first month, but with the possibility of a new location for the rest of the season.

Weekly programs include a keep-fit exercise group, speech maintenance, discussion groups for spouses, a business session and general interest projects for the whole membership such as education talks, guest speakers, games, films, slide shows and outings.

The co-ordinator is Gerry Patrick who has specialized in the needs of stroke victims. Physical and speech therapists are Mary Bingham and Allison Bullock.

Miss Patrick explains the club's main goals are to integrate stroke victims into the community as a result of increased confidence, ability and self-esteem; prevent family breakdowns through increased understanding, improved functions and family support and to provide community education for improved understanding and acceptance of stroke victims.

"Many handicapped people, and particularly stroke victims, have a tendency to withdraw almost completely from society," she points out.

"In a pleasant and directed atmosphere like the stroke club they associate with others sharing the same problems and there is a constructive and beneficial effect."

She also believes club members should be given as much responsibility as they can handle for club business.

"This can serve the need of an essential life role, and substitute for a former job."

The reason for day meetings?

"Stroke people tend to tire in the evening and, also, their day hours are those most in need of attention," Miss Patrick says.

Each member brings a bag luch and the club provides tea and coffee.

Car pools, volunteer drivers and the Easter Seal bus, when it is available, are all essential parts of the program.

Funding? Members pay $5 a year.

However, there are times when extra funds are needed to cover transportation, special treats and some of the planned events.

So, if you are looking for a worthwhile effort to help this fall and winter season, as a volunteer, with or without car, or as a money donor, contact Gerry Patrick, through the Heart Foundation office at 382-4035.

If she is not in when you call, leave a message. She will get in touch with you.

Marcos yanks robot cartoons

MANILA (UPI) — President Ferdinand Marcos has issued an order immediately cancelling television cartoon shows featuring robots to prevent Filipino children from acting like warring robots.

An announcement from the president's office said complaints reaching Malacanang Palace criticized the cartoon shows — most of them made in Japan — as being too warlike for children who were reportedly aping many of the violent robot characters.

The cartoons, which are dubbed in English and Filipino, have been watched by millions of Filipino children since they were first shown on local television two years ago.

Good guidebooks save heap of hassles

Lucy Izon

youth on the move

Taking off soon and looking for help? The travel shelves of bookstores are now lined with 1979 editions of budget travel guides.

But before you lay your money on the counter you should consider a few important points.

Remember that if it's worth its weight, a travel guide should be able to save you at least several times the price you're paying for it. It should also save you a lot of potential problems.

The first thing most young travellers need to know is where to stay inexpensively. A good guide will not only give you addresses and an idea of prices, it will also give you phone numbers. That will save you the time and expense of going to youth hostels or student-youth hotels and finding they're full.

It also helps you check on what the new prices are. Guide books are often researched as much as a year before they're published. Not only does inflation raise the prices, but some hotel proprietors have been known to jack up their rates as soon as they find out they're listed in a popular guide.

A good guide book will not only be of value when you reach your destination, but just as important, before you leave. It should fill you in on practical information such as health and entry requirements. If it tells you of the local laws, customs and traditions, it will help you from accidentally offending the local people.

It should also tell you how to see the sights without paying inflated tourist prices. Some attractions give special student or youth rates; some museums also have a day of the week when they're free. Tourist offices often advertise trips to local sights — you can do the same thing at half the price by using local public transportation. A good guide will warn you and tell you how.

It's great to know what to see and do in a major city without spending a fortune, but you'll soon find that you want to get away from the crowds. The most helpful guides are the ones that also tell you how to accomplish this.

On my trips I've found that the guide books researched and published by student organizations are usually the most helpful. They're written in a down-to-earth style. They tell you what's good about a place, but they're not afraid to point out the pitfalls and problems their researchers have encountered.

Here's a look at some of the student-youth guides that meet most of the requirements:

U.S.A.: Where to Stay in the U.S.A. for 50 Cents or $14 per Night. $4.75 CIEE, Council on International Education Exchange (General Publishing). State-by-state coverage of over 1,400 inexpensive places to stay. Extra information on 10 cities including information on hitchhiking, where to eat, entertainment and help hotlines. This guide includes Alaska and Hawaii.

LATIN AMERICA: Budget Travellers' Latin America, $6.50, also by CIEE (Clark Irwin). This book was formerly known as the Student Guide to Latin America. This second edition covers major cities, small towns, isolated beach resorts, cheap transportation, drug laws, history, geography and how to escape the commercialism at popular tourist areas.

ASIA: The Budget Travellers' Asia, $6.50, CIEE with the Australian Union of Students (Clark Irwin). Covers 56 countries from Turkey to Japan. Formally known as the Student Guide to Asia, this new edition has added a chapter on the People's Republic of China.

EUROPE: Let's Go' Europe, $6.50, Harvard Student Agencies (Clark Irwin). Without a doubt this is one of the most popular budget guides to Europe. It also includes chapters on Turkey, Israel, North Africa and the U.S.S.R.

The Let's Go group is also publishing separate guides for specific areas. This year that includes Let's Go: Britain and Ireland, $6.95; Let's Go: Italy, $5.95; Let's Go: France, $5.95.

Feet can suffer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — "Is nothing safe anymore?" asks the Harvard Medical School Letter on reporting that even tennis and running shoes can cause problems.

It says dermatologists warn that "occlusive" footwear — shoes that don't allow for sufficient air circulation — can cause inflamed, scaling, cracking and painful feet.

Solution: Avoid wearing the shoes for long periods, change socks frequently,

DECORATING

Joseph Egoyan

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on-location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A.ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and California College of Arts and Crafts, has taught at Oakland Tech. High, Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail fields as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years and Ego Interiors in Victoria for eighteen years. Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show was displayed at The Victoria Provincial Museum, The Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past fifteen years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoyan twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, more than a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS, FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY 7:30 to 9 P.M.

CLASSES START SEPTEMBER 24th, 25th, and 26th at EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF FIVE LECTURES ONCE A WEEK, $25.00.

Suicide? Wait, let's talk a bit first

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

Dr. Levine: I have made two serious attempts at taking my life. The third time I will be certain not to fail. If you can think of a good reason why I should live, then I will wait until this enters your column and take into deep consideration what you have to say. But I am probably beyond help, so I'll know that you agree with me if I don't see this letter in there within a month.

If you think this is a joke like most people would, then that would only add to my misery. At least let me rest in peace. I am female, 18 years old. No, I don't smoke pot.

ANSWER: Wow! You are laying a heavy trip on me, young lady. I can hear the clock ticking by, and I suppose that if this letter's publication is delayed beyond 30 days, then you'll have snuffed out your life — and it's then my fault!

You didn't sign the letter, or even put in a return address. I don't know where you live. I have a feeling that spending a couple of hours with an empathetic counsellor would be of great help to you, if only you'll give someone a chance to help you.

Or are you past the point of return? Two serious attempts raise very significantly the chance that you'll try again. You sound demoralized and alienated. But you also sound a trifle histrionic or melodramatic.

Your life is as significant as you want to make it. Few of us are saints or Nobel Prize winners, yet we can enrich the lives of those we come in contact with and love and they, in turn, can give meaning to ours.

You say that you did not ask for your life, and so you reserve the right to do away with yourself. Well, I can't argue about that with you. I can't hope to convince you in this brief response that your life can have meaning and joy. I can only appeal to the small part of you that wants to live. But if you reject that plea, then you will kill yourself. And you're right here too — we are all insignificant in the grand scheme of things; but to friends, and family, we are the very stuff of life.

I hope that you don't commit suicide, but frankly I am not optimistic. It really is entirely up to you. You might want to speak to a professional, however, before you make your critical decision.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 15-year-old boy and I don't seem to get along with anyone. I try to be friendly but people won't be friendly back. I've got problem acne and a lot of people bother me about this.

At lunch, when I sit down at a table with a few people I know, they either leave or start to cut me up. This really makes me mad, so I start cutting them up about their religion or nationality. I'm not always like this; only when something angers me. Once, I even beat up a girl and now people won't leave me alone about this.

I'm beginning to turn into an alcoholic, carrying a mickey of whisky around with me. I usually have a few friends then, but as soon as the booze is gone, so are they.

I've started lying and I've dropped down from being an honor student to one who is just barely passing.

What can I do? Everyone hates me, even the little 5-year-olds at the end of my street. Please don't suggest counselling as I would be too embarrassed to go. I'll try anything else.

ANSWER: If you are willing to do "anything" to gain friends then you should consider adopting a more constructive philosophy. Do those things that will make you feel better about yourself, and chances are that others may begin to feel that way about you too.

You were an honor student, now you carry a mickey of whisky. Which would you rather have for a friend — the person who works hard and is a good, intelligent, student, or the person who feels he can't handle his problems and is looking for answers in whisky?

Those people that make cutting remarks about you show a lack of sensitivity and feeling, but your attempt to continue to be friendly and treat people with respect takes understanding and guts on your part. It's not easy to be different, but try not to let these pressures force you into negative behavior. You are having a hard time, and I encourage you to contact a youth service so that you could meet other young people who are struggling with similar difficulties. Have confidence that you can help others as well as gaining from them.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I have a real bad problem. I really like my boyfriend and he likes me. I'm only 14 and he is 17 and that scares me a little. Every time he calls or wants to see me, my mom and dad don't let me out because they think I'm going to pick up guys. Every time I ask to go out they say "No," "It's too late," or "You go out too much."

When I do go out, I have to be in around 9 or 10 and this really is getting me mad. I sit at home and cry all the time. They don't know about my boyfriend. If they ever did they would kill me. What can I do to make them understand I'm young and should be having fun? Help me to be more persistent to go out.

ANSWER: I will try to help you, but you should also try learning how to cope with your situation rather than just thinking about getting your own way.

If you look carefully at what you have written, you will see that there are some weak points in your situation. The first of these is that you are scared a little because your boyfriend is much older than you. Then, you have kept knowledge of your boyfriend from your parents: Why? Is it because they are in some way right about you "picking up guys?"

It is not unreasonable for a 14-year-old girl to have to be home by 10 o'clock, especially if the parents do not know who she is out with. Do you ever read the papers or listen to the news? Don't you hear about girls your age being killed? I think you should let your parents meet your boyfriend and to get some confidence in your common sense.

Dear Dr. Powell: A friend and I have just started liking boys and holding their hands. The problem is we must have the sweatiest hands in the whole universe. What can we do about it?

ANSWER: I suggest both you and your friend powder your hands the way gymnasts do. You might try a light dusting of baby powder or corn starch. Do not use too much or you might end up with a sticky coating, but a little powder will keep your hands feeling quite dry.

'Blarney run riot'

LONDON (CP) — A British MP is demanding an explanation from the EEC commission for its "lunatic" 109-page survey of the non-existent Irish classical records industry. "This is Irish blarney run riot," says Tom Torney. "Why should the British taxpayer have to foot even part of the bill for brainless Brussels busybodies to poke their noses into things that don't exist?"

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

Wedding gifts debatable idea

DEAR ABBY: How about equal time to respond to that narrow-minded prude who wrote, "Couples who have been living together neither need nor deserve wedding gifts"? She further stated that the purpose of wedding gifts is to set the couple up in housekeeping, and couples who are already keeping house already have a toaster, dishes, pots and pans, etc.

Well, I have been living with my boyfriend for two years, and we still have no definite plans to marry.

One day, if I marry, I would like to have all new appliances, a complete set of nice dishes, matched silverware and glasses, etc. In the meantime, we're using my mother's old pots and pans, second hand dishes, and whatever else we could scrape together. We did not go out and buy new things to set ourselves up in housekeeping.

And as for not "deserving" wedding gifts because we've been living together, that's a laugh. If relatives and friends gave wedding gifts only to bona fide virgins, the jewelry and housewares merchants would starve to death during the month of June.

MAD

DEAR MAD: Other live-ins wrote to protest the same letter. But one reader in took me to task for my lukewarm reply.

Read On:

DEAR ABBY: So you think the parents of the kids who live together are so "thrilled" when the live-in lovers finally "make it legal," that they gladly kick in with the wedding gifts.

No way, Abigail! When our daughter, who is living on a very generous trust fund from her grandparents, finally married her freeloading, live-in lover, all we gave them was our best wishes.

Had she married a more decent man, we would have gladly given her a beautiful gift.

NO GIFTS

DEAR ABBY: This is for the 34-year-old married woman who quit college after her freshman year, regretted dropping out, but thought she was too old to go back to earn a degree:

You're never too old.

I started college at 37 and graduated the same year my oldest daughter graduated from high school. Three years later I took up skiing. Two years after that I started taking piano lessons.

I've been teaching physical education in high school for the last six years and love it.

There are still many other things I would like to do before I settle down in a rocking chair with a pair of knitting needles.

J.

DEAR J.: Congratulations. In no way do I mean to minimize your accomplishments, but I'll agree there are many readers out there who have returned to college, taken up a sport and begun music lessons much later than you. Readers?

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FLAT AS A BOARD IN NINTH GRADE": Save your money, honey. No creams, lotions or special exercises will increase the size of your chest. At your age the only options are padding and prayer but there's a lot to be said for accepting yourself as you are.

WISDOM offered

NEW YORK (AP) — A new program, Women In the Seventh Decade of Maturity, is being offered this fall by New York University's School of Continuing Education. The program, WISDOM, is designed to help older women meet the problems brought on by retirement, widowhood and other critical life changes, says its director, Rebecca Straus.

Del's denim ideas can save you cash

Kath Faryon's patchwork & quilting

School goes back next week and I remember a funny column I once read about all the money parents must pay out during those first few weeks. The article closed with the remark from a child to a parent: "Aren't you glad our education is free?"

To help you save a few dollars, I recommend the back-to-school section of From the Denim Den by Del Dunnigan. This book has many suggestions on how to use denim to make everything from blue jeans to hats and toys.

Why not transform a beat-up old binder with an easy-to-make Binder Cover? If you remember what your children's binders looked like in June when they came home, you'll agree this is a fine idea, not only for covering up the old ones (if they're still in one piece), but for jacketing the new ones so they have a better chance.

From a side view, the School Tote Bag looks like a pair of pants. Can we ever have too many tote bags? Del gives you the patterns for all necessary parts plus very helpful sewing tips for insets, zippers, pockets, welts and even patchwork. They are very clear, easy to follow and beautifully illustrated by Del's daughter, Sharon.

The little Donkey in our illustration is a perfect companion to make for those of the kindergarten set. His saddlebags can carry all sorts of treasures, and he should hold up very well for many hours of play, both in and out of school.

In addition to all of the above, there are also patterns for making things for the kitchen, including aprons, oven mitts and pot holders, items for the beach — totes and hats — plus dozens of ideas for decorating whatever you decide to make.

For back-to-school Moms, this book could definitely be your assignment.

Denim fabric pak — Lots of pieces to make many projects. $5.

Both of the above $8.

How to order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or money order to: Hearthside Patterns, Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Station E, Edmonton, Alta., T5P 4K2.

Physical link to stress

In newspaper columns and in magazines, there is now great emphasis on the subject of stress. Exactly what is stress? Is it a physical force? A psychological force, or a combination of both? — Mr. T.R.T.

Dear Mr. T.:

In this frenetic world, physical stress and emotional stress are related to each other and can result in a wide variety of illnesses. At universities, at medical schools and in hospitals stress clinics are being established at a surprising rate.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, dean of the Cornell University Medical College in New York City, is one of the leaders in the national educational program for physicians and the laity on the aftermath of stress.

At a recent medical meeting on the consequences of stress, Dr. Cooper said, "Stress is a major debilitating factor in illness. There are millions whose lives are affected by the emotional and physical consequences of stress." He further stated, "We have defined stress as the ordinary and extraordinary pressures of life that confront every person. When the sum of these pressures exceeds a person's ability to cope, the effects may indicate a need for professional help."

It is well recognized that excessive stress sets in motion nervous and glandular reactions that can alter the function of many organs of the body.

Obviously, there is no single form of treatment for stress problems for all people. The way to approach the management of stress is to study an individual's emotional predisposition and his environmental situation. With greater insight into the causes of stress, drugs, exercise, relaxation techniques, biofeedback, meditation and psychotherapy can be very effective.

Stress clinics devote themselves to the holistic approach to each person. This means the whole person, with all individual ramifications, is taken into consideration before a program of therapy is started.

The stress of modern living can be modified by the co-operation of the patient and the doctor, and the total outlook on life can be enhanced by the understanding of stress.

Most banks treat women fairly

A study commissioned by Chatelaine showed that as long ago as 1976, women were responsible for 36 per cent of the personal loans granted, and 37 per cent of car loans. In addition, according to Investors Syndicate of Canada, they own 69 per cent of all Registered Home Ownership Savings Plans. In the world of personal finances, that means clout.

But exactly how do banks view their women customers? We checked with 10 Canadian banks to determine their policies in areas of special interest to women.

It is generally believed that in most households the women handle the finances. And bankers recognize this. Peter Case, manager of public relations for the Royal Bank, says "more and more banking is being done by women, and we've noticed no differential in money management skills."

But with many women handling their own money for the first time, especially "suddenly single" mothers, workshops teaching financial skills can be very valuable. Royal Bank offers their expertise in setting up training sessions for social workers and other helping groups.

S.M. Davison, executive vice-president of the Bank of Montreal, says that although "women are becoming increasingly sophisticated money managers," they need some counselling. For that reason, they offer the services of their "money management lady", Pat Burns, for seminars on the subject.

Other banks indicated they considered it "patronizing" to offer special support services for women. What support they offer is directed equally at men and women. Bank of Nova Scotia and the Toronto-Dominion Bank offer booklets on money management, as do a few other banks. But most rely on the individual counselling of their lending officers and branch managers.

"This trend of women establishing their own accounts is likely to continue and is probably a good thing," said Wayne Allen, senior executive vice-president for the Bank of British Columbia.

It certainly is a first step to establishing financial independence. Many women rely on joint accounts with their husbands, but often find the account isn't really a joint account, but their husband's account. They have signing authority, but their husbands get any credit status that might arise from the account.

This is especially true on special accounts which offer chequing, overdraft protection and bank credit cards. The catch is in the credit card. Only one person can actually hold a credit card account. In most joint accounts that person is the husband, since he is likely the higher income earner.

Establishing a good credit standing is vital to managing your personal finances. Banks have changed their policies in recent years to reflect the new economic status of women.

Every bank we talked to assured us there were no differences in the standards applied to women borrowers. The only criterion they use is ability to repay. Because there are no laws requiring equal credit opportunity, the decision on an individual's ability to repay is a judgment by the lending officer.

A single woman can get the same credit treatment as her single or married male counterpart, assuming equal incomes, obligations and credit ratings.

But married women who don't work outside the home have no stable source of income, according to most banks. The Bank of Montreal will consider disposable income left over from regular housekeeping allowance in some cases, and to a lesser extent so will the Bank of Nova Scotia. Women trying to borrow on the basis of regular housekeeping allowances from their husbands should be prepared to prove that they can repay the loan.

Most banks are leery of counting on alimony or child income support. Applicants must show this income has been steady and reliable.

It is not a good idea to wait until you are desperate for a loan to establish your good credit standing. If you've never had credit before, the easiest way to start is with a gasoline company credit card, or a department store account. Make sure you pay the bills when they come due.

Then apply for a bank credit card. You may have a small credit limit at first, but if you handle the account well, you will soon have a good credit standing.

If you find you need to borrow money and have no credit history, show the lending officer your monthly budget. Prove to him that you can handle money, that you know where your money goes. Almost every bank spokesperson said women are excellent risks. One even went so far s to say "if a woman takes a loan it is 99 per cent sure she will pay it back." Remember that when you make your application.

If you're turned down, be sure to ask why. Every bank we checked said they would disclose their reasons and correct their records if you could show they were wrong.

High fashion at low prices

NEW YORK — Designer fashions at moderate, or near-moderate, prices are a reality — even at a time of runaway inflation. The secret: mass-produced clothing readily found in the at-home departments of most major stores.

Geoffrey Beene, Betsy Bloomingdale, Albert Nippon and Bill Tice are among the designers whose labels now appear on dresses, jackets, pantsuits and robes at prices ranging from $35 for a cotton-and-polyster wrap robe to $130 for a bare-midriff silk jumpsuit. Helping to keep prices down is the fact that they're made by Swirl, a firm that's come a long way from the days of the breakfast smock.

"Something needn't be expensive to be beautiful," said Tice, who also designes lingerie and gowns for his own firm at figures close to — and sometimes exceeding — $200. "Look for an eye-catching design, colors and a silhouette that suit you, and you should get lots of compliments."

Foil a burglar? Outfox him

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — If you're planning a late-summer or fall vacation, Const. Gerry Mann of the Waterloo regional police force has some handy ti-s that might help foil a potential burglar while you're away.

"Trick the person into believing the house is occupied," he says.

After checking that all windows and doors are locked, set lights on a timer, leave a radio playing, cut off mail service and don't leave notes to delivery companies.

Cariboo IWA accepts

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A tentative agreement has been reached with the International Woodworkers of America, a spokesman from the North Cariboo Labor Relations Association said today.

Association president Dave Gunderson, said that the main issue — contract expiry date — was resolved. The current contract expires today, and the tentative contract would run out June 30, 1981, the same date as the southern Interior.

Gunderson said the tentative agreement is similar to the contract recently signed by members Coast and southern Interior woodworkers, which provides an increase of 90 cents an hour in the first year and 9.5 per cent in the second on a base rate of $8.16 an hour.

He said it also provides recognition of local conditions.

Earlier, the union had begun serving strike notice on seven forest companies where union members had voted to strike to back their demand to change the contract expiry date.

Although strike notice would have taken effect Monday, it did not mean the union was calling a strike, a spokesman said Thursday.

Official defends doctors

VANCOUVER (CP) — A health ministry official says it is unfair for doctors to say the provincial government is making no effort to stop chronic-care patients from taking up beds meant for acute-care patients.

Isabel Kelly, assistant deputy minister, was commenting Thursday on a statement issued Wednesday by the Vancouver General Hospital's medical board that chronic-care patients are taking up almost 15 per cent of the hospital's 1,473 acute-care beds, delaying surgery and limiting admissions of genuine acute-care cases.

Kelly said about 1,500 beds now are under construction in Vancouver, and efforts are being made to further develop the home care program.

If a patient is occupying an acute-care bed, the provincial government will subsidize 24-hour home care if it can be done at the same cost as a hospital stay, she said.

Control tower fumed

OTTAWA (CP) — Sickening fumes seeping through a ventilation system at Ottawa's International Airport Aug. 21 forced air traffic controllers to vacate the control tower for the second time in a month.

No illness was reported and the transport department has started an investigation.

Mac Angus, local president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said fumes forced controllers to hand over control to a mobile field unit.

"The odor was noticed at 1:05 p.m. (EDT) and within 20 minutes the control tower was evacuated," he said.

Angus said the fumes were caused by the chemical Dearborn 870, used to maintain the airport's air conditioning system,

Hovercraft rescues fishermen

A 64-foot fishing vessel with five people aboard went aground on the east side of Canoe Rock between Moresby and Portland Islands this morning.

The Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft from the Vancouver International Airport and a Coast Guard inflatable rescue craft from Ganges were sent to the scene.

The five people were rescued unharmed by the hovercraft.

Names of the people and the boat were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Woman given world's first artificial spine

By LYNN DUNSON
Washington Star

BALTIMORE — In what is believed to be the first operation of its kind, surgeons at the University of Maryland Hospital in Baltimore today were replacing a portion of a cancer victim's spine with an artificial spine made of metal.

The patient, Jessie Thomas, 33, of Baltimore, has been lying immobile since July 17 when four vertebrae and a malignant tumor the size of a large cantaloupe were removed from her lower back.

The artificial spine will protect her exposed spinal cord and will allow her to sit up and use a wheelchair. There is a remote chance she may walk again. The metal spine was designed by the hospital's chief orothopedic surgeon, Dr. Charles C. Edwards, who performed Friday's operation.

The 15-hour operation to remove the tumor on July 17 was itself believed to be a medical first since this type of spinal cancer usually is considered inoperable and fatal. Doctors now believe Thomas' chances of recovery from the cancer are good.

Without the artificial spine, Thomas would be forced to spend the rest of her life motionless, strapped to a special stretcher which rotates 180 degrees every three hours.

In Friday's operation, which was expected to take six or seven hours, surgeons used a hollow metal device to attach the two portions of the spine and to enclose the exposed spinal cord, Louise M. White, hospital spokeswoman said.

The decice, between six and eight inches long, will extend from about the middle of the back almost to the base of the spine, she said.

Surgeons also were to graft onto the end of the existing spine some bone material which will grow and, eventually, fuse the spine back together.

The graft is necessary because "man-made materials don't last forever," Edwards said during a news conference Thursday.

Although the procedure is new, surgeons are optimistic that it will be successful, White said.

Doctors performed the procedure on a cadaver on Wednesday and, as a result, made some adjustment in a surgical tool developed especially for this operation by the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

Thomas was admitted to the hospital last spring suffering from paralysis caused by the tumor. The tumor did not show up in regular x-rays, but was discovered with the use of a scanner, which produces more detailed pictures of the body.

The massive growth had invaded the abdominal cavity and had entwined itself around the spine and spinal cord, White said.

Surgeons believe that all of the malignancy has been removed, White said. When Thomas has recuperated from Friday's operation, she will begin chemotherapy treatments to prevent reoccurance of the growth.

After Friday's operation Thomas will be put in a cast, but should be able to use a wheelchair in about two weeks. She will regain feeling in her legs and there is a slight possibility that she may walk again, Dr. Edwards said.

The prosthesis designed for the operation was manufactured by Zimmer Manufacturing Co. of Indiana at a cost of $1,625, White said.

Loose lips blow cover on S. Africa arms link

By DAVID C. MARTIN and JOHN WALCOTT
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At about 8 o'clock on the evening of Aug. 25, 1977, the West German freighter Tugelaland eased alongside the wharf in the harbor of St. John's, the ramshackle capital of the tiny Caribbean resort island of Antigua. Dockworkers began filling her hold with metal containers labelled "steel forgings," which were to be shipped to Barbados, 250 miles to the south. Then there was an accident.

Dockworker Mottley White remembers it:

"The crane on the dock, it collapsed, and the crane, the boom, everything went down into the hold. The big, heavy hook fell down and one of the containers flew open. I see the same big bullet shells we unloaded for this company before."

At first, White did not make much of the accident. He knew the American company that was shipping the containers, Space Research Corp., tested artillery shells for the U.S. military in Antigua and Barbados, and he had become accustomed to unloading thousands of the shells at a time.

But the falling crane broke open some thing more than a container of 155-mm artillery shells. It revealed the first glimpse of what the U.S. Customs Service considers an intricate arms smuggling scheme in which an American-Canadian munitions firm with close Pentagon ties has illegally supplied the apartheid government of South Africa with special 155-mm shells that have 20 per cent greater range than standard ammunition and no less accuracy.

The company, SRC, refuses to discuss the charges, which are contained in classified U.S. government documents. Those documents state that some 55,000 artillery shells, along with the expertise to duplicate them, were exported from the United States and Canada to South Africa in 1977 and 1978, thanks in part to the Pentagon, which unwittingly shipped at least 1,700 of the rounds to Antigua on vessels chartered by the U.S. Navy.

And some U.S. officials fear that government involvement in the scheme may extend beyond unwitting complicity, that someone at the CIA or the Defence Department, eager to counter Cuban military involvement in Angola, may have joined with Space Research and concocted a plan to bypass the 16-year-old arms embargo against South Africa.

Ballistics genius

As one high-ranking State Department official put it: "It is inconceivable to me that someone, either in the Pentagon or in Langley, did not at least know about this operation or, more likely, have a hand in it." At the Pentagon, an internal memo on the affair warned officials of "possible spill-over repercussions."

Over the years, Space Research, whose headquarters straddle the border between Vermont and Quebec, had done a small but steady business with the Defence Department — $9 million worth since 1968, including one contract to test eight-inch artillery shells at the company's Antigua test range.

Under the leadership of a ballistics genius named Gerald Bull, SRC had developed a worldwide reputation for extending the range of conventional artillery with no loss in accuracy.

Following the 1973 Mideast war, the Pentagon secretly arranged for Israel to purchase from SRC some 50,000 rounds of specially shaped 175-mm shells that were capable of reaching downtown Damascus from hardened emplacements on the Golan Heights, says a former company official.

Had the Pentagon or the CIA made similar arrangements for the South Africans, despite the arms embargo, in an attempt to counter Cuba's growing military presence in southern Africa?

Former CIA officer John Stockwell, at one time head of the agency's Angola task force, has written that in October, 1975 "the South Africans requested, through the CIA station chief in Pretoria, ammunition for their 155-mm howitzers," apparently for use against Cuban troops in Angola.

According to Stockwell, the request was endorsed by the chief of the CIA's Africa division but vehemently rejected by American diplomats who refused to countenace such a violation of the arms embargo. The scheme never got off the drawing board — officially, at least.

But a well-informed source says the CIA subsequently assigned a U.S. military man to help South Africa find the 155-mm shells they wanted to match the range of the Cubans' Soviet-made 122-mm long-barrelled cannon. According to this source, the military found a supplier in Brussels where, coincidentally, Space Research had a subsidiary.

From time to time, SRC itself has hinted of vague connections to U.S. intelligence. The arms smuggling scheme, in fact, bears a striking resemblance to the one conceived by the CIA. But Deputy CIA Director Frank Carlucci has personally assured the State Department that the "CIA does not have and never has had any connection with SRC," and there is nothing more than circumstantial evidence to contradict him.

The evidence against SRC, on the other hand, is substantial.

It first came to light two years ago, during a casual conversation between an Antiguan dockworker and the crew of the freighter Tugelaland.

"We are on the deck," remembers long shoreman Mottley White, "and the sailors, most of them is Portuguese fellow, are sitting on the boat and they ask us what kind of government did we have, was it black or white? We said: 'We have a black government.' And one of them, he shake his head and he say: 'It's a pity you have a black government encouraging shipping these things from here to South Africa.'"

Later that night, White returned to the Tugelaland to look for some keys he had lost. After he found them, he turned to go home and said to the ship's captain: "Say hello to your wife and family from Antigua."

"We won't be going home for more than six months," the sailor replied.

"You're not going home?" asked White.

"No," said the captain. "We're going to South Africa with this cargo."

'Steel forgings'

If that was so, it apparently would have been the second time that year that 155-mm shells purportedly being shipped from Space Research headquarters on the U.S.-Canadian border to test ranges in Antigua or Barbados had actually been carried to South Africa aboard the Tugelaland (which, although registered in Hamburg, was a South African ship).

On March 14, 1977, the freighter Moura docked in St. John's, Antigua, and unloaded 20 containers of shells marked "rough steel forgings" for Space Research. The containers sat on the dock for almost two months under the watchful eyes of the black-bereted Antigua Defence Force — a 300-man security force armed, trained and paid by Space Research. On May 15, 1977, the freighter Lindinger Coral deposited 16 more crates of "rough steel forgings."

When the Tugelaland pulled into St. John's nine days later, 36 crates containing 10,336 shells were waiting for her. According to customs declarations signed by SRC's shipping agent, the Tugelaland took aboard all 36 containers, as well as two radar vans, one gun assembly and other equipment, and set a course for Canada. But according to Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence, the Tugelaland next docked somewhere else — in Capetown, South Africa, on June 7.

The Tugelaland returned to Antigua to pick up an additional 872 tons of munitions in August, but this time the smashed container and the loose-lipped crew altered events. The Antigua Workers Union accused the government of Premier V. C. Bird of collaborating with Space Research to smuggle arms to South Africa.

In official Washington, there seemed to be little inclination to get to the bottom of the case. That made U.S. diplomats in the Caribbean even more suspicious of American complicity in the scheme.

What efforts there were to investigate SRC were repeatedly frustrated by the Antiguan government, which evidently was more interested in the revenue SRC could provide than in finding out what the company actually was doing on the island. A team of television reporters was also chased away at gunpoint by the Antigua Defence Force, and U.S. Customs agent Gordon Monroe, who arrived on the island April 28, 1978 to begin a belated investigation, got what he called "a song and dance" from local authorities.

But Monroe saw enough to conclude in his report that SRC's Antigua operation was "certainly a cover for something," although he added that it was a "poorly prepared cover," noting that SRC's lone test gun on the island had not been fired in some time, despite a contract with the U.S. Army for ballistic testing.

The Customs Service finally began a full investigation of SRC, and on July 4, 1978, agent Barry Greiner reported that the company had made at least seven shipments of arms to South Africa through Antigua or Barbados, five in 1977 and two in 1978.

Customs investigators also uncovered evidence that in at least one instance the Pentagon inadvertently financed the first leg of the journey through the Caribbean to South Africa.

Government documents show there was not much doubt about the "ultimate destination" of the munitions. One internal memo reported that the Customs investigation had concluded that "allegations of gun-running to South Africa by Space Research Corp. through its facilities on Barbados and Antigua . . . are in fact true."

Bird warned

The U.S. embassy in Barbados tried to warn the Antiguan government that SRC was using the island to help cover an arms smuggling scheme.

On the morning of July 12, 1978, John Eddy, deputy chief of the U.S. mission in Barbados, which serves the entire eastern Caribbean, met with Premier Bird and briefed him on what Customs had found. According to a State Department report, Bird stared out the window and said: "This is difficult. I will be in serious trouble."

At 3:30 that afternoon, as Eddy was waiting in the local airport for a flight to Barbados, the report continued, he was accosted by Warren Hart, a sometime FBI informant and former chauffeur at the U.S. Naval Air Station in Patuxent, Md. The five-foot, eight-inch, 220-pound Hart said he knew about Eddy's private meeting that morning with Premier Bird and warned the diplomat to back off.

Other peculiar things began to happen. An SRC employee, a Barbadian named Carleton Braithwaite, visited Eddy at the embassy and, according to State Department officials, he told Eddy about a tragic accident in Brussels in which an SRC employee had died after falling down a flight of stairs. No, said Braithwaite when Eddy asked if the man had a drinking problem: "People die in funny ways."

In Rutland, Vt., a federal grand jury is investigating the case, and, according to one government memo, "It is expected that indictments of SRC officials for illegal arms sales will be handed down within a few months."

But if the indictments come they will be too late, at least to change matters in Pretoria. On April 28, South African Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha announced that his country had developed, "in record time," a new long-range 155-mm cannon and shell.

GARDENING

Prepare winter soil now

To take advantage of present weather and a change which may come at any time, everyone with a small plot of soil or an empty tub or two should sow a few vegetable seeds this weekend.

This evening it might be possible to prepare the soil by working over and adding some new soil from a compost source.

If there is a choice, choose a spot where the low-riding winter sun reaches but where some protection from cold winter northeast winds can be given, and also a baffle to cold air drainage.

The vegetables we suggest for this sowing are not bone hardy frost-resistant kinds but they endure our normal winter cold and rain very well if given slight protection and the advantage of a choice location.

Cold-frame protection is ideal, for the glass cover can be raised, removed, replaced, and matted if a really hard frost occurs. Continuous cloches, which were sold here by the hundreds in the 1950s are even more desirable and were considered as less trouble by many gardeners.

A small square patch of soil wherever winter sun can reach from about 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. can be protected on the north and east by a small stake fence of rough lumber pieces.

This breaks up wind and frost blasts by filtering. Further protection can be added by draping or attaching cotton potato or onion sacks, or an old cotton floor mat, to the fence.

It is really surprising how well the young plants survive a tough spell and continue to grow after it is over. The main point is to keep the air moving, not to create a frost pocket while keeping off the worst of the wind.

Suggestions for choice of seeds for this sowing are from personal experience and are as follows, with a few comments. They are not necessarily in order of importance for each person or family will have preferences.

Swiss Chard either Fordhook or Giant Lucullus, Both germinate at this season in eight to 12 days. Leaves may be used two from each little plant while still small; or whole seedlings can be pulled as thinnings, leaving others to produce continuously throughout winter.

Endive, Curly Endive (or sometimes called Chicory) is a fine cool-weather salad plant as is Corn-salad with sweet corn flavor.

Early Simpson (white seeded) Lettuce and Cos (Romaine) a winter upright-growing lettuce, well flavored, are fine cool weather salad greens.

These all germinate readily in cool weather while the soil has a residue of summer warmth. They add much variety to healthful winter salads and are usually not available in stores because of loosing crispness and appearance when cut for shipping.

Chinese Winter Radish in the white variety germinates in about 10 days too. This vegetable in deep compost soil and well spaced, adds a pleasant crisp note to salads, soups, and mixed stir-fries, taking the place of water-chestnuts.

Allow a little extra time to sow the seeds almost one by one so that crowding is eliminated from the first. Have the soil damp before sowing; sprinkle with water each day if no rain; remove the tiniest seedlings at the end of the week or 10 days.

Transplant endive, lettuce, but not Corn-salad, radish or chard. While sometimes successful if taken when quite small eith plenty of soil, the last three have different kinds of root systems not readily replaced after transplanting.

Take time to look for these seeds; try farm supply stores and garden centres if department stores have no seed displays. And then make time to sow the dozen or so seeds of each kinds that you decide are most important to you. It will indeed be time well spent when you begin to enjoy the fresh salads after the summer supply is over.

Crush the Kurds and kill leaders, Khomeini orders

TEHRAN (Reuter) - The Ayatollah Khomeini accused Kurdish insurgents today of trying to set up a Communist state in western Iran with foreign backing.

Iran's unofficial head of state ordered troops to crush the two-week-old Kurdish uprising as soon as possible and said the rebel leaders had to be executed.

Meanwhile, a senior member of Iran's ruling clergy hinted for the first time at Soviet involvement in the Kurdish conflict and said the whole Iranian nation would fight to crush the rebellion.

In a sermon at a mass prayer meeting relayed over the state radio today, the Tehran spiritual chief, Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani, said: "Our northern neighbor has been accused of helping them (the Kurdish insurgents) and they are also getting help from another Moslem nation.

Iran shares a 2,500-kilometre northern border with the Soviet Union, which helped set up a short-lived Kurdish republic in this country after the end of the Second World War.

In a statement reported by the radio today, Ayatollah Khomeini said: "Corrupt people who have contacts with foreign countries are trying to set up Communism in (Iranian) Kurdistan.

"This is not a question of Kurds. What is at stake is Kurdistan. These people want to implement a Communist system in Kurdistan. The people of Kurdistan should know that these elements are opposed to Islam and that Islam is against the interests of their masters," the statement said.

"Senior army officers must provide military hardware to Igiic Revolutionary Guards to eradicate these corrupt roots as quickly as possible. Their leaders must be executed," the Ayatollah said.

Earlier today, Kurdish rebel anti-aircraft fire hit three helicopters, including one carrying deputy-premier Mostafa Chamran, during a government aerial mission over a suspected hideout of Kurdish leader Sheik Ezzeddin Hosseini, the Pars news agency said today.

All three helicopters, including a Cobra gunship and a reconnaissance helicopter also carrying ammunition, were hit but not shot down, Pars said. There were no reports of casualties.

From the report it appeared the helicopters were flying over an area between the border towns of Baneh and Marivan, now suspected to be the hideout of Hosseini, who left Mahabad after a stand-off between Kurds holding the city and troops encircling it.

Leaky truck just dying to see Maine

SCARBOROUGH, Maine (UPI) — State police troopers in four New England states couldn't believe their eyes Thursday morning when dawn broke over a 320-kilometre trail of passionate purple from Connecticut to Maine.

"I was driving to work this morning when I saw this bright-indigo trail all along the highway," Maine State Police Lt. Ormand Trask said. "I said, 'Holy cow, what is this?'

"I followed the stain into a truck yard here where a truck was parked with purple tires. The truck had been leaking dye all the way from Connecticut and it was raining the whole way. The stuff is real concentrated so it spread," he said.

"If you got it on your car, you wouldn't laugh," said Massachusetts state trooper Stephen Leary. "It's not funny."

A New Hampshire State Police spokesman said, "we've had a couple people call up, complaining the stuff splashed up on their cars."

"They don't like the color," he said.

The truck was carrying coal tar dye from the manufacturer, Atlantic Chemical Co. of Nutley, N.J., to the St. Regis Paper Co. in Bucksport, Maine.

The substance is totally non-hazardous and noncorrosive, and washes off with bleach and hot water, Maine State Police said.

"The dye was carried in a 30-gallon, cardboard drum," said Robert Drake, vice president of operations for Sanborn's Motor Express, Inc. "It chafed against the door of the truck and sprang a small leak. The dye dribbled out slowly, starting around Meriden, Conn."

Connecticut State Police spokesman Adam Berluti said "up to Meriden, it had painted a third of the centre lane a purplish color. From Meriden to about Cromwell, it went over to the right lane and was green in color. I wondered what the hell it was.

"It was something you'd see after a rain when the water brings out rainbow colors," he said.

The purple pigment moved up Interstate 86 to the Massachusetts Turnpike, around Worcester, Mass., and then north into New Hampshire and Maine.

Canada, U.S. big oil users

BOSTON (AP) — Leading Western industrial countries, with the exception of the United States and Canada, have either reduced oil imports or kept them virtually constant since 1973, a study by the Boston Federal Reserve Bank says.

The study said reductions in oil imports in the 1973-78 period ranged between 60 per cent in Britain to three per cent in Japan.

Canada showed a slight shift from exporting a small amount of oil to importing about 200,000 barrels daily, while the U.S. increased imports by 30 per cent, said the study by bank vice-president Norman Fieleke.

Italy reduced imports by 10 per cent, France reduced imports by 18 per cent and West Germany by four per cent.

In a study published in the bank's August New England Economic Review, Fieleke, an economist, said the quantity of U.S. oil imports rose by more than 30 per cent over the five years, representing an increase in the annual oil-import bill to $42 billion from $8 billion.

As part of his energy program, President Carter has ordered holding oil imports to the 8.7 million-barrels-a-day-level of 1978.

However, Fieleke said that in the first five months of 1979 U.S. petroleum imports averaged almost nine million barrels a day, and if this rate is maintained as the price settles at $20 a barrel, the U.S. will be spending $66 billion a year for imported petroleum."

He said the other industrial countries have reduced imports by finding energy sources other than imported oil.

Iacocca

DETROIT (AP) — The two top executives of struggling Chrysler Corp. are taking pay cuts to $1 a year to show confidence that they can make the company profitable again.

Chairman John Riccardo and President Lee Iacocca, who each earn $360,000 a year, said Thursday their $1-a-year salaries will continue until September 1981 unless Chrysler becomes profitable before then.

They get back all the forfeited money in two years only if the price of Chrysler common stock does not fall from its average for this month, expected to be about $8.

They will get more if the price goes up and less if it falls.

"This is something they wanted very much to do to show their faith that this company can be turned around," said a company spokesman.

Chrysler is seeking $1 billion in government aid to tide it over to 1981, when it says it should make money again.

The company, which lost $207 million in the second quarter of this year, has laid off 25,800 employees — more than one quarter of its hourly work force. It also is planning to lay off white-collar employees and has frozen white-collar salaries.

Chrysler is preparing proposed legislation for review by Treasury Secretary William Mibler. The spokesman said the salary cut is "not part of the plan to be submitted to treasury."

Chrysler's statement said the two executives' pay cuts are "part of a general corporate salary reduction program to be announced shortly," It did not elaborate.

Space-snaps color Saturn yellow with bluish bonnet

Times News Services

Pioneer 11, taking the best pictures ever seen of Saturn and its famous rings, disclosed Thursday a lovely, pale-yellow planet wearing a light-blue cap on its north pole.

On the ground meanwhile, it was revealed today that the Pioneer mission has run into unexpected and perplexing troubles.

Tracking stations both in Spain and Australia have developed transmission difficulties. Unless they are solved, space administration officials at Pioneer mission control in Mountain View, Calif., said the rate of information flow from the craft would be slashed in half during the encounter.

At the same time Saturn, by coincidence, was bombarded with high-energy particles resulting from two huge disturbances earlier this month on the sun.

The solar events occurred days apart, but particles from them arrived at Saturn at the same time, causing background noise temporarily masking observations by two of Pioneer's instruments.

Pioneer was unable to find Saturn's magnetic field in the area where it was predicted, a development that puzzled scientists. This could mean the field is smaller than thought, or it could mean the field does not exist.

If no magnetic field exists, fundamental theories about the nature of the solar system would be thrown in doubt.

From the size and strength of Saturn's magnetic field, scientists can deduce what is happening in the planet's interior. It is believed Saturn has a core of rock surrounded by liquid metalic hydrogen.

UAW eyes random strikes

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union may use "hit-and-run" strike tactics against General Motors Corp. if there is no contract by the Sept. 14 deadline, union officials said Thursday.

The designation of GM as the strike target by the UAW executive board was greeted by loud cheers when announced to the GM council, the organization of hundreds of officers of GM locals around the country.

"There's a possibility that there will not be a national, total, strike," UAW President Douglas Fraser told a news conference. But he added, "We're not ruling anything out."

Fraser said GM was chosen because its cars are the most popular and he hinted the walkout might be limited to plants that manufacture the company's fast-selling small cars.

Plants making those popular models might be shut in a mini-strike strategy, called by one union official "hit-and-run tactics."

GM's top negotiator, Vice-President George Morris, said in a statement after the union target decision that the company is "prepared to enter intensive negotiations" and believes its initial economic offer, made Tuesday, provides a "sound basis for resolving the issues."

GM proposed a 23-per-cent increase in pensions for workers who retire in the third year of the new contract and a three-per-cent-a-year pay raise coupled with a continuation of a cost-of-living adjustment.

Dancing Sally's dead

GLENDORA, Calif. (UPI) — Sally Rand, who invented the fan dance that scandalized and delighted the 1933 Chicago World's Fair and went on performing the dance into her 70s, died early today at age 75.

Miss Rand, who had been treated for heart trouble at Foothill Presbyterian Hospital for eight days, suffered a heart attack Thursday night and died at 2:30 a.m., a spokeswoman said.

Miss Rand's peekaboo dance, which depended on her adroitness with two big ostrich plumes, was considered the ultimate in daring in the 1930s.

McHenry to replace Young as UN envoy

NEW YORK (UPI) — Donald McHenry has been chosen to succeed Andrew Young as the chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations.

The announcement by President Jimmy Carter followed reports in both The New York Times and The Philadelphia Daily News today concerning the appointment of McHenry, who had been Young's deputy at the United Nations.

McHenry was not immediately available for comment on the report.

But ever since Young announced his resignation, McHenry's name was the one most frequently mentioned whenever the talk turned to the outspoken ambassador's likely successor.

The impression that McHenry would succeed Young was strengthened when the 42-year-old diplomat was chosen to head the Kennedy Airport negotiations with Soviet officials over the departure of Bolshoi ballerina Lyudmila Vlasova.

The Aeroflot plane taking Miss Vlasova, the wife of defecting Bolshoi star Alexander Gudunov, back to Moscow was detained at the airport for 72 hours last week while McHenry sought to determine that she was leaving the United States of her own free will.

Soviet officials at first refused to let American officials interview Miss Vlasova in what McHenry insisted had to be "non-coercive environment" off the plane. Finally, after two days and nights of intense negotiating the Soviets relented and allowed her to be interviewed.

Last week, when UN diplomats were asked about a likely successor to Young, reaction to McHenry was mixed.

The deputy ambassador, who like Young is black, is considered an expert in African affairs and has established a reputation as a solid, skillful and painstaking negotiator. He led the western talks with South Africa for an independence agreement for Namibia and is credited with improving U.S. relations with Angola.

U.S. gays to protest immigration quizzes

DETROIT (AP) — The New York-based U.S. National Gay Task Force intends to file a protest over the alleged harassment of homosexuals denied entrance to the United States from Canada, the group's executive director says.

Charles Brydon said his organization wants U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civilleti to "direct the immigration service to cease and desist questioning visitors to the U.S. with respect to their sexual orientation."

Byron said several women from Canada complained of being turned away at the border last week when they attempted to enter the U.S. for the Michigan Women's Music Festival near Hesperia.

Massive explosion feared in ship-barge collision

Scorched freighter gets soaking

GOOD HOPE, La. (AP) — Officials are keeping watch over a 63,000-gallon tank of butane gas beached on the Mississippi River after a fiery collision between a freighter and a tank barge which killed four men and injured 20 others.

Three other men are missing following the explosion Thursday which sent the barge and its load of burning butane drifting down the river and left a tug and the Peruvian freighter Inca Tupac Yupanqui in flames at the dock of the Good Hope Refinery.

Three hundred residents of towns along the river slept in emergency shelters or in the homes of friends as authorities watched over the potentially dangerous tank.

Late into the night, search teams patrolled the river looking for missing men but rescue teams had to wait to search the burned-out ship.

The explosion occurred when the freighter lost steering and rammed the barge, sending a fireball of gas across the ship.

Three of six butane tanks on the barge, each about the size of a railroad car, were ripped off and thrown into the river, authorities said. Two were beached and the third was assumed sunk.

"This barge had 8,500 barrels of butane in six compartments," said John Lucas, civil defence director for St. Charles Parish. "Our aerial survey determined one 63,000-gallon tank is not ruptured and that's the one we're afraid of exploding."

"The wheel got stuck and I couldn't do anything," said Carlos Ordonez, who was at the ship's helm at the time it went out of control. The freighter, loaded with soda ash, ran aground at the dock.

UVic magic box million-sound music machine

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Encased in a modernistic cedar box high in the bleacher section of University Centre concert auditorium are 1,700 pipes and thousands of other parts that make up the University of Victoria's new pipe organ.

For only $40,000 plus labor costs, UVic is the proud owner of the first mechanical pipe organ installed in Victoria in 100 years.

Most other pipe organs in the area, like the one in Christ Church Cathedral, are electric.

The 12-year-old instrument was built originally by an Alsatian designer for a Quebec church and modelled after pipe organs made by 18th Century Alsatian builder Andreas Silbermann.

After months of restoration, it will make its debut Sept. 23 in a performance of Durufle, a requiem mass.

Schwandt was looking for a harpsicord when he discovered a church eager to sell its pipe organ for $20,000.

Since medium-sized pipe organs sell for about $150,000 it was considered a bargain, even if it turned out the pipes were damaged.

Persuading UVic to purchase the instrument was "relatively a breeze," he said.

Victoria organ builder Hugo Spilker was dispatched with an assistant to the remote Quebec village to recover the organ.

The cargo arrived here in November and was put into storage for two months to allow the pieces to adjust to the West Coast climate.

In January, Spilker and University Centre architects came up with a design that would ensure visual harmony between the organ and the rest of the auditorium.

Since mid-July four men have been working full time restoring and repairing the pipes.

In worst shape were some of the wooden pipes. Surface veneer had warped and peeled due to dramatic climate changes in the drafty church.

The organ is inside a box 17 feet long, nine feet deep and about 20 feet high.

It has two manual keyboards and a pedal division that Schwandt said is capable of producing millions of sound combinations.

Registers are complete and provide almost any range of sound an organist could desire, he says.

The instrument will be used constantly by UVic music students, who in the past have had to book time on local church organs, in many cases travelling by bus from the university to practise.

The organ is well suited to music of the French classical era (1600-1789) and should give new insights into the music of Bach, and the modern French school.

Pipes are made from woods, tin, lead or copper — or from combinations of the metals.

They range in size from minute to massive. The largest pipe is 16 feet long and about one foot in diameter.

Pipe design is similar to that of a toy whistle and works the same way. Component parts are named after the human body and a pipe is said to have a toe, ears, a mouth and a lip.

Air shoots up through an opening in the toe of the pipe and across a flat disc across the lip, which starts the air inside vibrating.

Basically, the longer the pipe the deeper the sound and the wider it is the fuller the sound.

The initial $40,000 for the organ was donated by Dr. Joyce Clearihue in memory of her parents Judge and Mrs. Joseph Clearihue. He was the universirty's first chancellor and first chairman of the board of governors.

Brace for oil crunch: Ottawa

SASKATOON (CP) — Canadians must brace themselves for fundamental changes in energy matters, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn said Thursday.

The minister also said petroleum products will be in tight supply this fall and winter, but added:

"I am confident that we will see our way though this difficult period although the margin for safety is not great."

He also emphasized that the various regions of Canada must be willing to share the cost and benefits of energy issues.

Current Canadian prices, about $10 a barrel below world prices, do not encourage Canadians to conserve energy, he warned at a conference in Saskatoon.

"Obviously, some more appropriate area than the $2-increase-a-year is necessary," the minister said, referring to the current schedule to increase domestic oil prices $1 a barrel at six-month intervals.

"However, any increase must be accompanied by offsetting actions to deal with a number of related economic impacts, particularly in the non oil-producing provinces and to help low-income Canadians."

The minister, who only the previous day held talks on energy issues with cabinet colleges in Jasper, Alta., was vague on who would receive the price increases.

"The federal government has an obligation to enourage sharing while at the same time permitting those provinces which have titles to resources to benefit fully.

"I strongly endorse the ownership rights over resources of the producing provinces.

"But the federal government must deal with the macro-economic and regional problems caused by increases in oil prices."

There are nine principles on which federal energy polices should be based: Energy self-sufficiency by 1990 with increased Canadian ownership; prices that reflect true replacement costs; resolving problems fairly for all Canadians; increased support for conservation; substitution of abundant energy resources for scarce ones; an energy policy that supports economic growth in Canada; greater security of supply, particularly for Quebec and the Atlantic provinces; encouragement of research and development for new enegry sources; and safe and environmentally accepable energy production.

The minister warned that Canada must move faster to develop domestic oil sources. Last year, Canada had an oil-trade deficit of $1.4 billion.

He said that in 1978 Canadians spent $22 billion on energy, 10 per cent of the gross national product.

Another problem was that foreign-owned oil companies benefit more from present tax incentives then smaller Canadians firms.

"We will be taking steps to increase the opportunities for Canadians in the energy sector."

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark sets out tonight in search of a Canadian oil price increase formula acceptable to both producer Alberta and the consuming provinces, notably Ontario.

The prime minister announced Thursday that he will meet Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed in Calgary tonight and Premier William Davis of Ontario either in Toronto or Ottawa next Tuesday.

His talks in Calgary will be private and the Soviet troop protest by U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The United States charged today a brigade of some 3,000 Russian troops is now stationed in Cuba and said it has expressed strong concern to the Soviet Union about the buildup only 145 kilometres from Florida.

The increase of Soviet military strength to an estimated 5,000 uniformed troops on the island was detected by air reconnissance and other intelligence methods, said State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III.

"We are concerned about the presence of Soviet combat troops in Cuba," he said. "As President Carter recently stated, it is our policy to oppose the presence of Soviet combat forces in this hemisphere."

He said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance raised the issue Wednesday with Soviet officials in Washington, but has received no reply.

Carter would not speculate on Soviet motives for the troops increase, nor would he lay out any possibilities of U.S. action.

In addition to the approximately 5,000 troops now stationed in Cuba, there are 6,000 to 8,000 Russian civilian advisers on the island, Carter said.

But the brigade is the first Soviet combat unit detected on the island. Carter said U.S. intelligence detected elements of the unit as far back as 1976 but could not confirm presence of the full unit until recently.

It is the U.S. fear that the Soviet troops could form the training nucleus for a series

Mainland pickets disrupt service on E&N

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Union pickets from the Lower Mainland this morning wrecked the travel plans of more than 50 persons who planned to ride the Esquimalt and Nanaimo railway Dayliner to Courtenay.

The one-day picket line was set up by Burnaby members of Lodge 58 of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of Canada at the E&N station in Esquimalt around 7:30 a.m., three-quarters of a hour before the Dayliner was scheduled to leave on its Up-Island run.

E&N railway workers refused to cross the line even though the pickets claimed their intention was not to picket the railway but rather to announce a special union meeting later today in Burnaby.

Four union members appeared — two at the roundhouse and two at the station — with placards that read the meeting was being called to discuss mediator Judge Gold's report on a new union contract with carmen employed by Canadian Pacific Railway in B.C.

Union member Ron Wiksyk said the carmen are not happy with the settlement which was agreed to by all other craft unions in May.

He said the carmen feel that because they have completed a five-year apprenticeship and are tradesmen, unlike the other crafts, they should get more pay than the contract provides.

But Gold, in his report, upheld the contract and denied the carmen's request.

"It's not a picket line," he said. "It's an information line. If the trainmen want to interpret it as a picket that's their business. But we aren't picketing the railway."

That was of little comfort, however, to the crowd of people — senior citizens, women with children, tourists and visitors from as far away as Great Britain — who had gathered on the platform this morning to take the scenic ride to Courtenay.

"It's the ruination of a long-planned day," said Dirk Post who came over from Vancouver with his father to ride the line.

"How can they (the trainmen) do this?" he said. "It's not legal to disrupt service."

She had promised Zachary a train ride to Parksville before school starts. Now, she said, she'll have to make alternate arrangements.

The unexpected cancellation was a big disappointment also to Mike Lloyd.

Lloyd, a producer with BBC television in London, is on a trip through B.C. gathering research for a documentary on the province.

"I was told to ride the line as it is supposed to be particularly scenic," he said.

"The railway even gave me special authorization to make the trip," he added.

Seized boats total now 18

The seizures of the Cecilia B of Monterey, Calif., and the Miss Bright of Astoria, Ore., brings the total number of American boats arrested to 18.

The U.S. government does not recognize jurisdiction over highly migratory fish, such as tuna, beyond a 12-mile limit. Canada claims jurisdiction over all species within its 320-kilometre territorial limit.

The Canadian Forces destroyer-escort Mackenzie assisted federal fisheries protection officers Thursday in the seizure of six other boats near the southern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Two American boats seized late Wednesday are being escorted to Victoria by the fisheries protection vessel Laurier and are expected to arrive here tonight.

The six ships seized Thursday are sailing for Victoria accompanied by the FPV Tanu, which effected the first seizures Sunday. They will arrive here late Sunday or Monday.

The skippers of the first eight boats seized appeared in court in Victoria Tuesday. They pleaded not guilty to charges of illegally entering and fishing in Canadian

Dock blaze in N.W.

Firemen from Surrey, Burnaby and Richmond joined New Westminster firemen today to battle a major dock blaze which sent a pall of black smoke across the port city.

Police say a man aboard the boat is missing.

The stubborn blaze was burning along about 100 yards of the dock's pilings and underside and firemen said late this morning little or no progress was being made in the attempt to bring it under control.

Operators out: flights delayed

Radio operators walked off the job at some airports across Canada today on 24 hour study sessions and were working to rule at others, causing flight delays but no major problems.

Rybak says that at Smithers airport there are supposed to be only emergency service provided, but after the walkout started at midnight last night, a PWA flight left and was provided with full service.

A radio room operator at the Vancouver International Airport said this morning that the strike is in effect and that there is only minimal staff on duty.

The members of the Union of Canadian Transport Employees went on strike in Regina, Saskatoon, Toronto, Montreal and smaller airports in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Quebec.

Air traffic controllers are handling most of the operators' duties at the major airports. But Transport Canada said earlier flights would have to be cancelled at small airports.

The radio operators, without a contract since July, 1978, and in a legal strike position since Tuesday, are dissatisfied with a conciliation board recommendation that would give them a $1,250 increase in annual salary on Aug. 1, 1978, and $1,300 more on Aug. 1 this year.

Zoom the way to a new high

By HARRY NELSON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — An herb that is the main ingredient of a Brazilian soft drink has almost overnight become the California drug culture's latest fad.

Marketed as a food under the trade name of Zoom, the pulverized plant seeds stamped into tablets are said by some of its users to have the stimulant punch of cocaine.

Actually, according to pharmacologists and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, Zoom, like the herb from which it is made, has no more punch than a couple of cups of coffee because its chief active ingredient is caffeine.

But all over Los Angeles, the herb and health food stores that sell Zoom say they can't keep it in stock.

Zoom's distributor, Marc Bernstein of Beverly Hills, said that since he first introduced the product several weeks ago, he has been "swamped" with orders.

"We've had days when we sold 3,000 cases (12 bottles to a case)," Bernstein said. The cost of a bottle of 90 tablets (800 miligrams each) at one Los Angeles store is $9.95.

The label on the bottle says Zoom "comes direct from the Amazon jungle to you." It says the product is "100 percent organic" and identifies it as guarana.

Guarana is an Amazonian woody vine that belongs to the soapberry family of plants. In Brazil, where it has been used for centuries by Indians as a stimulant, guarana is the base of a popular carbonated beverage.

"Caffeine is the only active alkaloid in guarana," Dr. Ronald Siegel, a psychopharmacologist in the department of psychiatry at UCLA medical school, said.

Dr. Andrew Weil, an authority on drugs and a consultant to the Harvard Botanical Museum, says some users may be adversely affected by caffeine without knowing it is in the tablets. Among them would be cardiovascular and ulcer patients and insomniacs.

Control the controllers

The reaction of the coach of the New Westminister Bruins hockey team to the comments of provincial court Judge James Shaw unfortunately only adds credence to what the judge had to say about those who control hockey.

Ernie (Punch) McLean told reporters shortly after seven of his players were sentenced that he didn't think the outcome of the case would change his aggressive style of coaching. The coach added that he was worried about the effects the hearing would have on hockey "because the judge's ruling makes a hipcheck a criminal offence."

It's to be hoped that hockey coaches and managers, whether working with tykes or pros, managed to glean more from the judge's words than did McLean.

In handing down the sentences, Judge Shaw clearly thought that the senior partners in the offence had escaped. "The underlying authors of this brawl are not before the court. The entire system of hockey as it exists in North America today, from midget to NHL, the team owners, managers and in particular the coaches must bear a large share of the responsibility. These young men are manipulated — apparently happily — by the owners and coaches to do exactly as they are told."

Since the players themselves are the ones who throw the punches and wield the sticks, they end up the pawns of a system that to date demands a level of intimidation and aggression that in more instances is finding itself in conflict with the law.

The judge hit the nail on the head with his summary of how to reduce the level of violence and increase the quality of play: "It lies in a revision of the attitudes of some owners, managers and coaches at all levels of organized hockey."

If the antics of the seven Bruin players were taken out of the context of a hockey game, they could well have ended up in jail. Instead, because the incident occurred in a hockey arena where the heat and nature of the game become mitigating circumstances, the shame is more severe than the penalty.

While it is questionable whether two months probation and an order restricting league play until Dec. 1 will act as a deterrent to other players, it is clear no permanently effective headway will be made until owners, managers and coaches are forced to share liability for the actions of their players.

Many argue that hockey spectators demand the violence and aggression so prevalent in the system. The vast majority of fans, we believe, want triumph over the Russians, and it's obvious that to accomplish that, more emphasis must be placed on skill.

There is a big difference between a clean hipcheck and assault, in the eyes of both the law and hockey.

Sense of fair play

Nobody should be surprised by what seems to be the Governor of Alaska's sense of fair play when it comes to an international fishing dispute.

Jay Hammond says that he is 100 percent behind the Canadian stand on the tuna controversey. He says he agrees with Canada's position of enforcing its fishing control over the 200-mile limit because Alaska also has a 200-mile limit.

One of the major reasons Canadian halibut fishermen are getting the boot from Alaskan waters is that state government's insistance that Canadians should not fish within their 200-mile limit. Hammond mounted a significant lobby to the U.S. state department to have that sovereignty assured.

If anything, the governor's hard-line stand earlier this year has done much to antagonize Canadian fishermen and politicians, and to precipitate the current tuna dispute.

Despite the underlying current, Hammond's credos are likely welcomed by Canadian officials because of the obvious problems they create for the American negotiators trying to present a united front.

Since Hammond is so willing to recognize our 200-mile limit now, maybe he will be as accommodating when the the negotiators turn their attention from fish to maritime boundary treaties.

The Dixon Entrance boundary which separates B.C. from Alaska has been in dispute since Canada and the United States claimed 200-mile limits. The Americans say the boundary is mid-channel while Canadians claim the boundary that has existed for years, one that lies approximately 12 miles to the north.

It will be interesting to watch Hammond when those talks start.

Winning war on red tape

WASHINGTON — The regulatory reform movement is still very much alive, but it is taking a little forced respite. After a year of highly publicized efforts to improve the performance of regulatory agencies, a dearth of new regulations to use as testing grounds has forced a slowdown.

The regulatory analysis review group, a White House-based body created by President Carter to review about 20 coming regulations per year, currently has no such reviews under way and only a very small number appear likely in the next few months. For the most part, the issuance of major new rules, commonplace a few months ago, has dried up.

Still a mystery

Of the list of several dozen coming major regulations prepared last spring by the review group, only two have appeared, and the group decided after reviewing the formal language of those that there were not enough problems to justify a review. The occupational safety and health administration, once a major source of such proposals, has offered none in recent months, and none are anticipated soon. The environmental protection agency, as well, has been largely silent on major regulations.

"The agencies have not in the last four months or so come out with the blockbuster regulatory proposals we expect every month or so," said one White House staff member.

Why that has happened is something of a mystery. But it may be that regulatory overhaul efforts have finally made their mark and that agencies have at last become sensitive to the impact of a string of multi-billion-dollar strictures.

In the interim, the regulatory watchdogs have turned their attention in other directions. One somewhat new direction is toward economic regulation, such as in the transportation sector, rather than toward social issues, such as the environment, which had previously been the focus of the economists.

The economists cite, for example, a decision earlier this summer to allow free competition among interstate bus companies temporarily during the busy summer season. That type of overhaul, the economists believe, will produce lower fares and better service for travellers.

Another coming focus of the regulatory overhaul team is the department of energy, which, the economists contend, has regularly flouted the procedures set down last fall by the president. In a vast majority of recent cases, the economists say, the energy department has issued regulations on an emergency basis, bypassing a requirement that a regulatory analysis be issued. Without such an analysis, action by the economists becomes difficult.

The economists plan to use the clout of the office of management and budget to press the department of energy to improve its record. As part of that effort, the budget office is expected to provide Congress with an evaluation of how various agencies have complied with the president's requirements of last fall.

□

The central intelligence agency, frequently the source of controversial reports on energy, has issued a new study of the world oil market in the years ahead in which it contends that without "unprecedented rates of conservation," economic growth in industrialized countries will fall short of goals.

Slow growth

The reason, says the agency, is the prospect of a continuation of the intermittent shortages and sharp price escalations of the last six years.

"The industrial countries somehow will have to adjust to a slow growth of energy supply and a stable or declining oil supply," the agency said. "The adjustment will take the form of increased energy conservation, reduced energy growth or, most likely, some combination of both of these."

In general, the CIA's assumptions are on the bleak side: a decline in United States oil production, a decline in exports from Communist countries, and continued restrictions for political reasons by a variety of foreign oil producers.

The result, according to the CIA, is a world gap in supply over demand in the next three years of two to five million barrels a day, depending upon how much growth the industrialized countries try to achieve.

RICHARD GWYN

It's better to be an oilman

In tones of dismay and disapproval, the Calgary Herald reported recently that Canadian taxpayers "may have paid as much as 93 per cent" of the $150 million supposedly invested by Dome Petroleum last year to search for oil in the Beaufort Sea.

In its textbook example of investigative journalism, the Herald picked its way through dauntingly complex tax loopholes such as the "super-depletion allowance", to show that ordinary taxpayers, without knowing it, are contributing virtually all the "risk" capital being spent in the Beaufort.

The single flaw to the Herald's calculation was that it was too conservative. If only the subsidy were so small. In fact, Canadian taxpayers are paying up to 110 to 120 per cent of the costs of Dome and of the lawyers, doctors, businessmen and similar high income types who, to avoid paying taxes, have thrown their pin money down exploratory frontier wells.

Cost plus premium

This confidential calculation, revealed by a cabinet source here, means, if you bring yourself to believe this, that taxpaying shmucks like you actually are paying the entire cost plus a premium. Once oil is found, with your money, Dome and its investors will keep the entire profit. (By "entire profits" I mean entire profits: as an example, Shell Oil last year so ordered its affairs that it paid not one cent of federal taxes. By "shmuck" I mean shmuck: no government had judged it necessary to tell how your tax money is being used.)

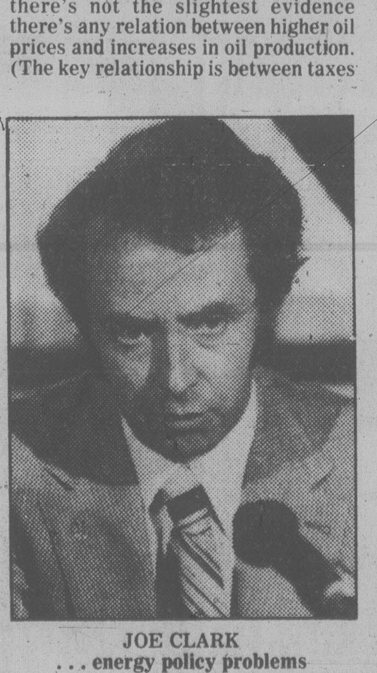
Once your rage at your own gullibility has subsidied, allow your imagination to take off. Picture yourself now as a member of Prime Minister Joe Clark's inner cabinet. You and your colleagues are assembled here to meet in a rather gloomy log cabin, surrounded by spruce trees, chipmunks, Japanese tourists and short-sleeved RCMP officers who sit in the sun reading pocket books by Harold Robbins and Alistair MacLean.

Your job, as a label on your black ring binder tells you, is to consider: "Directions for the Government: A Planning Basis for the Next Year." Among these directions, energy policy is by far and away the most important.

Remember, that, as a Conservative, you have just won an election by denouncing the former Liberal government for creating new bureaucracies like Petro-Canada, and by promising to achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1990 by giving the oil companies additional funds to invest in exploration through a combination of higher oil prices and tax incentives.

However, you have just learned about the tax rip-off on frontier wells, and about how even in non-frontier wells, in Alberta, say, the taxpayer's share of the cost is typically 98 per cent.

You have learned as well, as one cabinet source put it: "a) there's not the slightest evidence the industry needs more money (how could it when taxpayers are providing almost all the exploration funds anyway? and b) there's not the slightest evidence there's any relation between higher oil prices and increases in oil production. (The key relationship is between taxes due and the taxable income from additional oil production.)"



JOE CLARK

Take those facts, and while still imagining yourself as a member of Clark's inner cabinet, consider now what you should do about your promises to abolish Petro-Canada and to rely instead upon the oil multi-nationals by throwing more money at them. Nothing, is the quick answer.

Instead, you begin to grow up. This, mostly, is what the inner cabinet has done during the first two days of their four days of brainstorming here. So far, they have reached not a single policy decision. Instead, all of them newcomers to office, they have begun, as one minister put it, "to understand what it is we are actually doing."

Example. If you accept that oil prices will do nothing to increase oil supplies (since, through the courtesy of unaware taxpayers, oil companies already have all the exploration funds they need) then why raise oil prices at all? "Sure, higher prices may do nothing to increase oil supplies," said a cabinet source, "but there's abundant evidence they will reduce demand. Thus, as a conservation measure, higher prices are justified to help us achieve self-sufficiency."

True. However, instead of a general oil price increase, which would simply fatten the revenues of the oil companies, why not a specific excise tax applied at the pump? Funds generated by the tax then could be applied to specific, necessary projects — tar sand plants, frontier exploration — through a publicly owned company such as Petro-Canada.

But the Conservatives have promised to abolish Petro-Canada. As well, an excise tax would invade provincial jurisdiction over oil. True, if our oil prices go to world levels, Alberta's Heritage Fund will be $30 billion by 1990. Already, with the fund at a mere $5 billion, Alberta has run out of ideas of how to spend its money. Still, the Conservatives promised a "fresh face on federalism" by getting on with the provinces. In return for allowing Alberta to keep all the money, they hope Alberta will co-operate by recycling more of its windfall revenues into the other provinces.

Tax on profits?

As an alternative to an excise tax, or to higher across-the-board oil prices, then, how about an "excess profits tax" imposed on the oil industry to scoop off part of the extra revenues companies will get once prices are raised? The Conservatives, though, promised to get government off the backs and out of the pockets of private industry. Also, how could Ottawa use this extra oil revenue except to an agency such as Petro-Canada, which of course it has promised to abolish.

Round the rectangular table in their log cabin, and beneath the unblinking gaze of a stuffed Rocky Mountain ram, Clark and his inner ministers have begun to realize what it is they're actually doing, without, yet, and almost certainly to the meeting's end as well, being able to decide what it is they should actually do.

A last test of your imagination. Which, now, would you rather be — a member of Clark's inner cabinet, paralyzed into indecision amid the chipmunks, or a taxpaying shmuck safe at home?

Me, I'd rather be an oilman.

Improve queues

On returning from Vancouver on Aug. 23, I joined a queue of vehicles half way along the Tsawwassen causeway at 2:05 p.m., my intention being to catch the 3 p.m. ferry to Swartz Bay.

From that time until 3:25 p.m. I and many others both in front and behind me played a "stop-go" game until I was at 3:25 p.m. eventually assigned to the fifth lane of passenger vehicles destined (we hoped) for the 4 p.m. ferry. The 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. ferries had arrived and departed during the our crawl along the causeway.

During the period between 2:05 and 3 p.m. a considerable number of buses, trucks and campers passed the causeway queue and on my eventual entry into the terminal compound at 3:25 p.m. I noted that with the exception of three campers all the other vehicles which had bypassed the queue had boarded the 2 p.m. ferry (left 2:45 p.m.) or the 3 p.m. ferry (left 3 p.m.).

Since this was the third time during the past five weeks that I had observed this pattern of embarking commercial vehicles and campers, I asked for an explanation at the terminal control tower and was informed: (a) regular buses have reservations; (b) livestock has full priority; (c) commercial vehicles have priority providing they arrive 30 minutes before sailing time.

The first two policies I find entirely acceptable. The third I find questionable since I too use the ferries in the course of my employment and could easily arrive two hours before a truck only to see it board before me, and, as was happening on Aug. 23, arrive after the 30-minute deadline and still board. Naturally the controller in the tower insisted that vehicles did not pass the queue on the causeway but many scores of drivers and passengers would insist otherwise as I do.

I would appreciate some assurance that the established policy will be adhered to and indeed that the 30 minutes latitude allowed commercial vehicles be reviewed as it related to private/passenger vehicles.

I would also like to propose that some relief be afforded the passengers of private vehicles from the uncomfortable conditions that prevail during the "causeway crawl" lasting anything up to two hours. As a possible solution I would suggest that the parking compound be more fully utilized by accepting the vehicles earlier and quicker and then allowing the passengers to wait in one place with the refreshment area available. This I am sure would be of considerable help to persons with young children and to the elderly, especially during the hot weather. — A. J. Broome, Victoria.

Request detracts

Amid all the eulogies that followed the death of John G. Diefenbaker, my comments may appear those of an iconoclast, which I am not. I do honestly admire the old Chief's loyalty to the monarchy, his concern about Canadian unity and his love of Parliament and the democratic process.

There are, however, a few things that I do find rather distasteful and, as a free citizen in a free country, I have no hesitation to point them out.

It seems rather unusual that he requested a state funeral. A state funeral is given by the government in power to statesmen, outstanding war heroes, etc. in recognition of their contribution to their country.

There is no doubt that the Canadian government would have unanimously approved of a state funeral for a man who devoted his life to public service. But to request this last tribute detracts, not adds, to the solemnity of the occasion.

What a contrast between this request and the modesty of the late Lester B. Pearson, Secretary of the UN ambassador, diplomat and Nobel Prize winner for his intervention in solving the Suez crisis which might have developed into an armed conflict.

In recognition of Pearson's role in international affairs there is a college that bears his name: the former Liberal PM didn't ask for this honor: it was bestowed upon him by a grateful nation, to perpetuate his memory which will last forever.

John G. Diefenbaker saw to that as to leave his mark on posterity, by bequeathing a large part of his estate to a Saskatchewan museum filled with his memorabilia, by a distribution of some of his works to high school students and by a recreation centre that will bear his name in his constituency.

Surely the good people of Prince Albert would have named a stadium, a school, a recreation centre after their most famous son imported from Ontario. They would have declared Diefenbaker's Saskatchewan home a national heritage building, dedicated streets, hospitals, etc. to the man's memory.

These tributes are, and should be, a spontaneous expression of a country's, of a province's, of a city's feelings. But if they are requested in a will and testament, they lose most of their significance. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

A little history

Re: your story in the Times, Aug.25 relating to the old horse buses in London, England. My father was one of the originals who drove from Central Meat Market to Stamford Street over Black Friar's Bridge which then was a two-lane cobbled bridge. His bus was known as the Halfpenny Bumper. He used to take his dinner every Sunday covered in a red handkerchief. They were days of hard work and no money. He also drove for Patrick Hearn, Grays Inn Road, the four-in-hand coach to the Derby with the gentry with postillion and also drove the first petrol-driven bus out of Holloway garage for the London General Omnibus Company.

I could tell you a lot more about Clerkenwell, when it was rough, and London. — A. G. Steen, 1410 Fort Street.

Adams hopes Irish people will rise up against terrorists

'What, that Seaway fellah again!' said Mountbatten when he bumped into Adams at a Vancouver dinner

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The murderers of Earl Louis Mountbatten of Burma are vicious animals and should be treated as such, says retired Canadian admiral Ken Adams of 2330 Harbor Road in Sidney.

"People who do things like this do not deserve the dignity of people. They are animals and should be destroyed like any destructive animal," Adams says.

"I'm hoping the decent people of Ireland — there must be plenty, the great silent majority — will rise up and destroy the animals in their midst."

Pausing, he adds: "I don't think I could be any madder."

Adams and Mountbatten first met in 1929 as lieutenants in HMS Victory, the Royal Navy's barracks and training establishment at Portsmouth.

In those days Royal Canadian Navy personnel relied on the RN for all but their basic training.

"He drove a very fine automobile — it was either a Rolls Royce or a Daimler. He had a silver sailor with the call-up signal in semaphore, J, on top of the radiator cap," Adams recalls.

They met again in 1930 when Adams was serving with the RN's third cruiser squadron in the Mediterranean, operating out of Malta. Mountbatten had just been given command of one of the RN's newest destroyers.

Provincial government buildings will fly their flags at half-mast from sunrise to sunset on Wednesday, the day of the state funeral in London for Earl Mountbatten of Burma.

Adams, now 76, was three years younger than Mountbatten and said he had little in common with a destroyer captain at that time.

But he and Mountbatten met frequently in the officers' club at Valetta. Mountbatten, he says, was an avid user of the Malta polo grounds.

"I knew him to be a very capable destroyer captain in the days when they used to pride themselves on their shiphandling ability," he says.

"I've forgotten how long Lord Louis served in that destroyer but he was later transferred to a ship in the China Station."

The rapport and respect between Mountbatten and his crew was so strong, Adams says, that when Mountbatten was transferred, the whole ship's company transferred with him.

"It was a tremendous gesture on the part of the crew. He was a born leader and tremendous seaman."

When he returned to Canada, Adams kept close tabs on Mountbatten's progress.

"I was always interested, especially when he was chosen at a very early age to become viceroy of India.

"He was responsible for the establishment of Pakistan. He was sailing awfully close to the wind but I had complete confidence he'd pull it off with success."

In 1953, Mountbatten again influenced Adams' life.

At that time, Adams was in Hamilton "running reserves, universities, sea cadets . . . all the odds and sods jobs."

Mountbatten was then the First Sea Lord and had decided that the days of the silent service were over and that navy men had to rely on public support for their existence.

Adams was summoned to Ottawa and told to go out and sell the navy to Canada.

"I don't know if I was so pleased with Lord Louis at that time," he says with a wry smile.

Adams and Mountbatten met again in Toronto in 1959, the year Queen Elizabeth officially opened the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Adams had retired from the navy and was working for Canadian Westinghouse.

At the request of the Canadian National Exhibition's president, he was loaned to the CNE to organize a massive gathering of naval vessels in Toronto.

"It was a matter of teaching Toronto to become a sea-port overnight. All the way along Toronto's waterfront it was nothing but ships."

Mountbatten opened the CNE, making his headquarters in one of the four RN ships that were alongside.

"He dubbed me that Seaway fellah," Adams recalls.

"Once again he showed his great understanding of people and what people were trying to do. He had great dignity, a great sense of humor and the people of Toronto just fell in love with him."

Adams was greeted with: "What, that Seaway fellah again?" when he last met Mountbatten in the 1960s in Vancouver.

Mountbatten had been asked to be guest speaker at a fund-raising dinner of the Variety Club of Western Canada.

TOWN TALK

If the enemy penetrates the Tweed Curtain, or an earthquake occurs, Oak Bay council will be ready aye ready.

The object of a bylaw to establish an emergency plan, which council will be asked to approve at its next meeting, "is to ensure the continuity of the government of the Corporation of the District of Oak Bay during emergencies."

This includes the maintenance of law and order, the saving of life, the protection of the health and welfare of the citizens and the preservation of property.

Authority to deal with emergencies is given to council and the emergency program executive committee will consist of the three aldermen making up Committee B.

At all costs.

But the capper has to be the first item of what to do in the event of an impending or actual, natural or civil disaster.

"Investigate and confirm," is the rule.

Anyone trying to phone B.C. Tel's new phone mart on Scott Street opposite Hillside Shopping Centre is out of luck.

The number is unlisted and will remain that way until Tuesday when the store officially opens.

A woman attempted to phone the store Thursday and when she couldn't get through decided to drop by. While there she asked if she could use the phone.

Ottawa electronics technician Bill Stone, who is moving to Victoria, last week received an envelope mailed from a Victoria real estate firm Aug. 1. It was properly addressed and carried the correct postage.

But stamped across the front was the official cachet, CLEARED BY CUSTOMS.

Whatever may be said about rock musician Max Webster it is apparent he doesn't have much of a following here.

Memorial Arena announced this week Webster's Sept. 6 concert in which he was to appear with special guests FM has been cancelled.

The reason: not enough tickets sold.

He succeeds Harry Boon who has gone to Vancouver to set up a new FM jazz station for the parent company.

Easingwood will still keep a hand in the news department, continuing to host the station's popular post-noon-news talk show.

Auction halt asked by board

The Capital Regional Board was to ask B.C. Supreme Court today for an interim injunction stopping auctions at 2510 Happy Valley Road in Metchosin.

The board, in material filed at the Law Courts, claims that Helena Heinrich, 3504 Happy Valley, is contravening a regulation which does not allow auctions on the property.

Signs were spotted June 11 reading "Happy Valley Auction Centre--Consignment Sales — Cars, Trucks, Trailers, Rec Vehicles, Motor Homes, Tent Trailers."

The board said an auction took place on June 23.

The application for the interim injunction pending trial of the issue was to have been heard Thursday by Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan but certain preliminary objections by Ross McLarty, counsel for Mrs. Heinrich, resulted in an adjournment to today.

The regional board says B.C. regulation 20-67 lists approved uses for lands in rural zones and auctions aren't included.

McKenzie meeting called

Fraser asked to step in

Highways Minister Alex Fraser will be asked to provide a detailed explanation of the McKenzie Avenue extension route to angry area residents, Saanich Ald. Fred Severson said today.

The alderman said he wants Fraser to attend a public information meeting in Saanich council chambers within the next two weeks.

"It's time to clear the air," he said in a call to the Times.

Protest letters and telephone calls convinced Severson a meeting is needed.

He said he is willing to chair the meeting, but it will be up to the highways ministry to do the talking.

Severson said he wants deputy highways minister Tom Johnston and his planners to "thrash it out" with Garden City Homeowners Association and other groups complaining about the route of the four-lane extension which will link Pat Bay and Trans-Canada highways.

Municipal planners will also be at the meeting and other members of council will be invited, he said.

Since aldermen will be attending the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention next week, the meeting will have to take place the second week in September.

SEVERSON

But efforts will be made to make sure the meeting is held as quickly as possible.

"I'm getting a lot of letters and I'm sure other council members are too," Severson said.

Residents on both sides of the planned extension say they are joining forces to fight the highways ministry, and have criticized Saanich for not representing them.

Homeowners' association spokesman George Van't Haaff said Thursday the preliminary design approved recently by Saanich council doesn't have the approval of any area residents.

Attempts to get an explanation from highways ministry officials have been repeatedly brushed off, he said.

Homeowners on the west side of the extension say the move means devaluation of their property, destruction of parkland, and that blasting will take place dangerously close to a sewage holding tank.

Marigold spokesman Daniela Gauvin said the 86-unit co-op isn't satisfied with the design either and wants guarantees of a buffer zone of trees and protection against noise and pollution.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you tell me if Lady Emmeline Pethick-Lawrence, leader of the women's suffrage movement in the early 1900s, wrote a book? J.C.

A. She wrote My Part in a Changing World, published in 1938.

Q. When was the English newspaper News of the World founded? J.H.

A. 1843.

Q. Are the Oxford Group and the Oxford Movement the same thing? J.O.

A. The Oxford Group was the name given to a religious movement initiated in Oxford in 1921 by Dr. Frank Buchman. The Oxford Movement was started in 1833. Its main aim was to make Anglicans (Church of England) aware of the church's catholic principles. The movement was also known as the Catholic Revival.

Q. Persians today are Muslims. What religion prevailed in that country before the Muslim conquest? W.H.

A. Zoroastrianism.

Construction starts on Gorge apartments

The property, formerly the site of the San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court, has been purchased by Litwin Construction Ltd. from 76 Developments.

The former owners, a group of local businessmen, attached a $1.6 million price-tag to the land and put it up for sale about a year ago.

Under a land-use contract negotiated with Saanich in 1976, 76 Developments was going to build six four-storey apartments, but the project was postponed because of poor housing market conditions. The contract was renewed in mid-1977 for two years.

The new owners intend to meet all conditions of the contract, which includes supplying a strip of land along the water's edge for a park, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Thursday.

Saanich will also receive a large contribution toward the Gorge trunk sewer line, he said.

A public meeting will be held so Litwin Construction can explain the development to area residents.

Student job-finder now seeking work

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

After helping to find jobs for 1,388 teen-agers this summer, Holly Weidner is looking for one for herself.

She spent the past seven months as manager of the Canada Employment Centre for Students but today it closed its doors in anticipation of Tuesday's return to school.

"I'll take a brief holiday, to rest up a bit, and then I hope to find permanent work in Victoria," she said.

She has had experience working with juvenile delinquents and handicapped people.

The student employment centre opened in May and job-seekers from UVic began to come in at the rate of 200 a day.

By June many of them were employed and then the more difficult task of placing high school students began.

"The community responded well. Employers hired as many as they could afford and then householders began phoning in for casual help. We placed 438 in casual jobs this summer, up 137 from last year."

While 3,892 of them did not get jobs instantly, most were working before the end of summer.

"We gave them counselling on how to look for work on their own, how to prepare resumes, how to dress and so on."

The long-term results were rewarding, she said.

"This month when we phoned some of these people to see if they still wanted work, most had found a job on their own."

In one case this month, she said, she pulled 25 names from the file of those who did not get jobs in June and 20 of the 25 reported they found work later in the summer.

The most consistent thing she noticed about job-seekers this summer was a seriousness of purpose.

"Everyone was eager to work and willing to dress up and prepare resumes in order to find a job."

Working with Mrs. Weidner, 25, were five undersity students hired for the summer.

One member of the summer staff was on the road every day, talking to local employers, trying to line up additional jobs. The others acted as counsellors and job-placement officers.

"As an innovation we organized private counselling areas this year," Mrs. Weidner said.

The tourist industry provided work for almost half the 1,388 students who found employment through the office. A large number of office jobs also were obtained.

Hiring was up in the private sector but there were fewer government jos than last year.

With the closing of the centre, university students looking for work are being referred to the Canada Employment Centre office on the campus. All other young job-seekers are being referred to the main office at 810 Fort.

The student office at 2653 Douglas reverts to the Youth Employment Centre, operated by Susan Vallor, which provides job information to schools.

'NFL Today' launches new season

CBS, NBC and ABC will kickoff regular football season coverage this week. On Sunday, Sept. 2, CBS' "NFL Today" premieres for the 1979-80 season. ABC will follow suit on Monday, Sept. 3, with "Monday Night Football," and on Saturday, Sept. 8, with the first telecast of "College Football '79." NBC will begin coverage of American Football Conference games on Sept. 2.

A record number of 110 National Football League games, including two preseason games, four post-season contests, plus Super Bowl XIV, will be broadcast by CBS Sports during the 1979 season — the 24th consecutive season NFL games have been broadcast on CBS.

Of the 103 regular season games, 80 are National Conference games and 23 are inter-conference between the National and American Conferences.

The live coverage begins Sunday, Sept. 2, when five games will be broadcast regionally: Atlanta at New Orleans, Dallas at St. Louis, Green Bay at Chicago, New York Giants at Philadelphia, San Francisco at Minnesota.

Doubleheaders will be presented on eight Sundays: Sept. 16 and 23, Oct. 7, 14 and 28, Nov. 4, and Dec. 2 and 16. One of the highlight games is a rematch of last year's Super Bowl contestants, the Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys, which most of the country will see on Oct. 28.

Other coast-to-coast games are on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 22, and Saturdays, Dec. 8 and 15.

The five post-season games will be broadcast nationally, starting with a first-round playoff game on Sunday, Dec. 23. The winner enters the NFC Playoffs, scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 29, and Sunday, Dec. 30, as the Wild Card Team. The NFC Championship game will be played Sunday, Jan. 6, and two weeks later, Sunday, Jan. 20, Super Bowl XIV will be played in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

Each NFL game will be preceded by "The NFL Today," a pre-game, halftime and post-game program originating from NFL Control in New York.

The Emmy Award-winning "NFL Today" broadcasting team of Brent Musburger, Irv Cross, Jayne Kennedy, Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder and Jack Whitaker (who additionally won an Emmy for "Sports Personality of the Year") will be on hand to provide an indepth look at the games.

ABC's "Monday Night Football" will cover the Pittsburg Steelers-New England Patriots face-off on Monday, Sept. 3. Then on Saturday, Sept. 8, "College Football '79" features Alabama vs. Georgia Tech. from Grant Field in Atlanta, Ga.

NBC coverage of major-league football coincides with the CBS schedule. Starting on Sunday, Sept. 2, with a national double-header, NBC will follow the American Football Conference contests up through the December playoffs.

Labor Day Telethon

The Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon, the entertainment spectacular, broadcast live from Del Webb's Hotel Sahara in Las Vegas, will be seen this year on Channel 11, starting at 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 2 and ending at 4 p.m. Monday, Sept. 3.

The annual 21-hour marathon to benefit the muscular dystrophy association will again feature comedy, music and dance by some of the biggest names in show business.

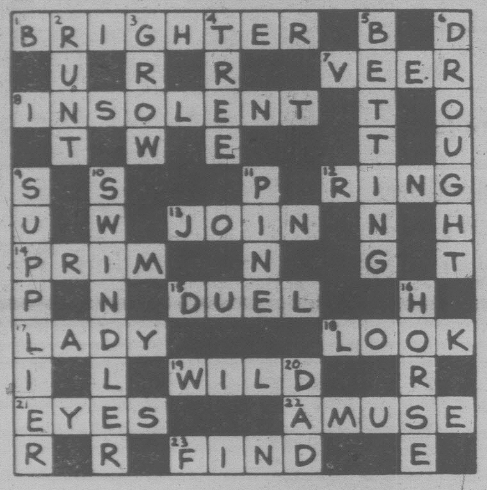
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

1. BRIGHTER not brighten. BRIGHTER is the more natural answer: one would think in the sense of "that will make him better" rather than "that will make him improve."
7. VEER not peer. The clue suggests eccentric behavior, but it is not difficult to imagine a man peering up and down the street (trying to spot a taxi?) without his being "tipsy."
8. INSOLENT not indolent. The phrase "see no reason to try to help" reflects resentment, favoring INSOLENT.
12. RING not sing. The tones a good choir produces when the members sing make the walls RING.
13. JOIN not coin. You can't play unless you JOIN in the game. And one coin wouldn't get you very far.
14. PRIM not prig. "A little prig" (firm condemnation, this) is more than something the person merely tends to be. Also, there is no reason why a boy sweet-natured enough to befriend a prig should be of the same stamp himself.
15. DUEL not duet. Without the clash of swords, etc., a DUEL would suffer loss of impact as suggested; but, without sound, there isn't really and DUET.
17. LADY not lads. It seems improbable that a number of passing lads, coincidentally expert in paramedical matters, should all earn the casualty's gratitude by practicing on him.
18. LOOK not loom. "LOOK close enough" has a suitable air of practical assessment. "Loom," on the other hand, is the sort of word used more for colorful effect and is less ideal in the context given; it's not a question of looming this or that distance away.
19. WILD not wind. WILD effects of unleashed natural forces — wind and rain and stormy seas or whatever — would include wind effects.
22. AMUSE not abuse. The clue hints that the defendant in question might seem to imagine he was helping his chances; in this connection, AMUSE is more reasonable. Also, presumably, he could hardly be prevented from shouting an insult at the jury (as opposed to "trying to").
23. FIND not fund. Since it relates typically to an organized supply or source of money for a specific purpose, "FUND" is not quite the right sort of word for the context given.

CLUES DOWN

2. RUNT not rung. The clue tends to presuppose weakness in a rung/RUNT (that it may be "just too ... etc."), so RUNT is more apt. It is quite enough to suppose that a rung, normally strong, might be weak.
3. GROW not glow. The clue's quantitative approach favors GROW. Lava may glow, while the amount of it (i.e., "the flow") may GROW.
9. SUPPLIER not supplies. A SUPPLIER can "provide" quality in a more active sense than supplies, which merely embody it.
10. SWINDER not swindles. Arguably, while a practicing SWINDLER can fail in some cases, actual swindles always succeed, otherwise they aren't swindles.
11. PINE not vine or wine. The clue's word "impressive" suits a fine tall PINE better than a fine vine, which (e.g., due to pruning, and not being evergreen) may be of undistinguished appearance. A fine wine is not necessarily appreciated, and it should be enjoyable rather than "impressive." Line and mine are not favored.

ANNA MARIA HOSFORD plays Clara Jones on Guiding Light, one facet of the three careers she's been juggling for more than a decade. Robert Desiderio, a new face on Search for Tomorrow, portrays Prince Antonio Stradella.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Anna juggling three careers

By JOHN GOUDAS

As fans of Guiding Light know, Holly has been serving time in prison for the shooting of her rapist-husband, Roger, and she has been befriended by a sympathetic young inmate named Clara Jones. Ms. Jones is portrayed by Anna Maria Horsford, who is not only talented but extremely enterprising. For the past 11 years, Anna Maria has been juggling three full-time careers at once and has managed to succeed in each of them. After struggling to get a foothold in the New York acting community, Anna Maria decided to get a steadier job to meet her expenses. An agency sent her to Channel 13 (the New York Public Television station) for a clerical position. However, Anna Maria was there only one day before a producer sent her on the TV studio floor and had her serving as an assistant producer, a capacity she has maintained throughout her 11-year tenure (which incidentally is still in effect).

"I used to act at night in showcases and did voice-over dubbing for commercials and recordings during my lunch hours," said Anna Maria. "I appeared in a movie (An Almost Perfect Affair) filmed in Cannes during my vacation."

Earlier this season, Anna Maria won a small role in the ABC Theatre production Hollow Image and when she went to work on the day after the drama had been aired, a receptionist at Channel 13 looked at her and told her she had seen an actress on TV the night before who could have been Anna's double.

Still, Anna Maria chose to keep her double (or triple) life a secret. When she won the part of Clara on Guiding Light, however, the girl on the 7th floor (Anna Maria) suddenly became an instant celebrity.

CHANNEL CHATTER. More new faces on Search for Tomorrow. Robert Desiderio plays the handsome Prince Antonio Stradella, a business associate of Travis (Rod Arrants). He's appeared in movies, off-Broadway and in regional theatre, and served as a radio announcer on many stations. Also recently joining the cast is seven-year-old Gregory Sutton, who plays a blind seven-year-old lad named Simon D'Antoni, the son of the late Nick D'Antoni. Simon's story will prove intriguing and mysterious during the next weeks.

For those with busy schedules, Love of Life's Chandler Hill Harben (Ben Harper) will appear at the UNICEF concert, Gift of Song, at Sussex Votec High School, in Sparta, N.J., on Saturday, October 6. Chandler will be playing some of his own songs, and his fans in the area will want to make it a point to attend.

Former soap stars, Morgan Fairchild (Jennifer Pace Phillips on Search for Tomorrow) and Andrew Robinson (Frank Ryan on Ryan's Hope), will make a guest appearance on Young Maverick a CBS mid-season replacement series . . .

Jamie Lyn Bauer (Lorie Prentiss on The Young and the Restless) has landed a starring role in a new dramatic, made-for-television film, Island of Beautiful Women. Also starring are Peter Lawford, Steven Keats and Jayne Kennedy (NFL Today co-host). Jamie is playing a fierce, beautiful woman programmed to kill all men — in a matter of speaking, that just what she's been doing for years on "Young and Restless".

PLOT PORTENTS. Anyone care to give odds on pregnant Marlena having problems on Days of Our Lives? Nothing is ever easy for the lovely psychologist. Margo gets Mike out of a jam with Earle, only to become a perfect patsy for slimy Earle.

Wily Vanessa Prentiss is pleased by the fracas between sons Lance and Lucas over Leslie on "The Young and the Restless." Thus Vanessa gets even with daughter-in-law Lorie. Thanks to Snapper and Brook, Rose's prostitution operation is exposed, but will the teenaged hookers go straight?

Inmate Gail puts a plan into action to seduce Peter on Guiding Light. Hope and Allan become intimate, a situation which spells trouble for the pair when and if they're rescued.

Nina stands up to Palmer on All My Children, but the cost is yet to be determined. Phoebe has a new secret to live with when she gets a most unexpected visitor.

Brad hits a new low on One Life to Live, while Maggie tries to emulate her sister Pat. Edwina is rehired as she seems to be developing a conscience. Meanwhile, Richard and Becky are summoned and all is not well with poor Joe Riley.

Steve finds out about Joey Dials' toy gun on Edge of Night. Raven puts one over on Logan but Elliot might be caught with in an embarrassing situation.

TV MAILBAG

END OF QUEST — I know Tim Matheson got a lot of attention for "Animal House," but I remember him in a TV western a couple of years ago. Can you help me with the name? — Mary Baudine, Spencer, N.C.

"The Quest" was an NBC series that lasted three months. It was shot down for low ratings and a too-violent approach. Kurt Russell played Matheson's brother in the show, which had them searching for their long-lost sister.

JOKING JUDY — You answered a question recently where a reader mentioned Julie Harris as being in a detective show. Well, it got me to thinking. Didn't she star in a TV comedy once? — Yvette Lumley, Glassboro, N.J.

"Thicker Than Water" was a comedy, but few people thought it was funny. Harris played her usual staid spinster in the 1973 summer replacement show. Richard Long played her swinging brother.

NO PAIR — Can you tell me if James Garner and Peggy Ann Garner, who starred in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," are brother and sister? How old is each? Also, did she win an Oscar for that role? She was marvelous. — Lydia Pinker, Long Prairie, N.M.

James Garner's real name is Baumgarner, and he and Peggy Ann Garner are not related, although their age difference — he's 51, she 48 — is not great. Ms. Garner was named "outstanding child actress" by the Academy for that 1944 film.

TALL TINA — Can you tell me how old that tall beauty Tina Louise is? Also, what movies did she appear in before "Gilligan's Island"? — Lou Rizzo, New Haven, Conn.

The statuesque redhead is 45, believe it or not. Some of her early pictures include "God's Little Acre," Day of the Outlaw," "Armored Command" and "For Those Who Think Young."

TO THE POINT — What was the name of the charming cartoon that was shown on TV about five years ago and had music by Harry Nilsson? Also, who was the narrator? — Missy Bishop, Warehouse Point, Conn.

I think you mean "The Point," about a boy who was banished for having a round head when everyone else's was pointy. Dustin Hoffman did the voice-over for that 1971 TV movie.

TV AFFAIR — Who played Sharon in "Sharon: Portrait of a Mistress"? — L.M., Biloxi, Miss.

She probably wishes she hadn't, but Trish Van Devere played the gal who slept around with married men in that one.

MIXED PAIRS — My mother says James Farentino is married to Mary Ann Mobley, but I disagree. Who are they married to? — Lisa Elbacher, Lubbock, Texas.

Tell your mother it's an interesting match, but not the right one. Farentino is married to another attractive brunette, Michele Lee, while Mobley is married to another handsome actor, Gary Collins.

I do! Known to trivia mavens as Ghislaine Perreau-Saussine, she was great in "Has Anybody Seen My Gal." Come to think of it, though, has anybody seen Gigi Perreau?

WHAT CHANCES — What's the chances of "The Wild, Wild West Revisited," based upon the great 1965 to 1969 series "The Wild, Wild West" and starring Robert Conrad and Ross Martin, becoming a regular series again?

The television experts said they couldn't bring back "Gilligan's Island" and yet, it's returning this fall!

For those of us who have been dedicated fans of the original "Wild West," can we expect to see James West and his multifaceted partner, Artemus Gordon, again? — T.K., New Windsor, N.Y.

I wouldn't count on it. Both Conrad and Martin have emphasized that they agreed to do "Revisited" only for nostalgia purposes and not to resurrect the popular series.

CALLING DRACULA — Who plays Dracula in "Cliffhangers" and where can I write him? — L.C., Warren, Ohio.

Dracula is played by Michael Nouri and you may write him at NBC Entertainment Division, 300 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

GRANADA INVITES YOU TO TAKE YOUR LAST LOOK AT A COLOUR T-V REPAIR BILL.

Plus a colour loaner if your TV ever needs shop service.

Granada guarantees you'll always have something to look at. And it won't be a repair bill. Ever.

All Granada locations are open daily from 9 AM to 9 PM, and Saturday till 6.

John Hearn's collectibles

A lady from Victoria writes to say that she finds my column so "sensible" and goes on to describe how she took one of her treasures to five different experts for identification and received five different answers. This is a perfect illustration of Hearn's Law No. 5, which states, "never consult more than one expert unless you want to be confused."

By sensible I suppose she means that I never claim to be anything more than a layman writing for laymen (laypersons). I'm still findng out, and what I find out, I share.

It does, however, create problems for me. I try to write for the non-experts, for the less than fanatical collectors, for people whose hobby is not their whole way of life, and above all, for people with modest budgets.

The paradox of all this is that when I go looking for information to share, what I find, particularly on the shelves of my reference library, is all written by experts, for experts — the Morton Shulmans whose advice on how to spend $1000 wisely so that it soon becomes $2000 makes fascinating reading particularly for those with $1000 to spend.

This, although you would never have guessed it, is a long-winded introduction to this week's subject which is spoons. I came across a book caled A Collector's Guide to Spoons Around the World, by Rainwater and Felger (Nelson; 1976) — 400 pages crammed with illustrations of more than 2,000 spoons. A splendid book which I would unhesitatingly recommend — but for its interest, not its usefulness.

Here you will find Egyptian and Roman spoons, medieval spoons, spoons presented by Queen Victoria to Prince Belosselsky-Belozerky in 1853 on the occasion of his marriage to a German bride, Scandinavian love spoons, two of them joined handle to handle by a 2-foot chain all carved out of a single piece of wood.

There are spoons from the Phillipines which, it is noted, are less ornately stylized than those from Nukora. There are over 200 spoons associated with the Apostles and other holy figures. Most of these are less spoons than elaborate metal sculptures. It is inconceivable that they could ever have been used to stir anything.

There follows 200 caddy spoons — shorthandled miniladles with relief figures from Dickens and Shakespeare. Caddy, it seems, comes from the Malayan word, KATI — a weight amounting to little more than a pound. Tea used to be so expensive that silversmiths would make specially designed locked boxes to keep it in. They became known as caddies. Given current trends in coffee prices we can look forward to special containers for that commodity. Maybe they will be known as "safety deposit boxes."

We are still barely halfway through the book; salt spoons, infant feeding spoons, medicine spoons, spoons with coats of arms, spoons with runic inscriptions, spoons belonging to castles and kings, cathedrals and bishops, spoons of all nations.

Yes, there is a Canadian section devoted to RCAF spoons, RCMP spoons, spoons commemorating Royal visits and horn spoons of the Haida Indians.

If it sounds as though I am belittling this lovely book, let me hasten to correct that impression. Spoons are wonderful collectibles because there are so many of them, and they are quite cheap and they occupy so little room. But a book of this nature tells only about spoons none of us are ever going to see.

So where does this leave all my friendly spooners? Right were they were, looking around gift stores when they travel, picking up handsome specimens here and there, not because they hope they will ever be valuable, but because of their fine craftsmanship and because they have a story.

Five-bedroom Tudor-style home

Here's an outstanding practical design for the larger family which has acquired a narrow-to-medium frontage building lot, and which requires both convenience and a sense of luxury at every turning. This one-and-a-half storey design, with full basement and double enclosed garage, derives optimum living space from its attractive and compact package.

The Tudor-style exterior, finished in stucco and heavy accent boards, with shake roof, stone chimney and bay window, presents a charmingly traditional facade guaranteed to complement any urban or rural residential area.

The deeply weather-protected entrance leads into a compact reception foyer and naturally right, down two risers, to the large and convivial sunken living room. The living room features a large cantilevered masonry fireplace with a full-width hearth and a window seat set into the bay window. Further traditional charm is lent by the diamond-paned side windows of the bay.

A well-planned extended U-shape kitchen separates the formal dining room and the very long rectangular family room/dinette combination. The kitchen has an excellent work triangle configuration and generous work counter area. The family room has a second masonry fireplace and sliding glass doors to a large rear deck for easy access to outdoor dining in fine weather. A two-piece vanity bath is just off the family room, as is the mud room, which is also accessible through the two-car garage.

All five bedroome are positioned around the central bath, linen storage area and laundry/utility room which features a side-by-side configuration of washer and dryer. Both the master and second bedrooms have en suite baths, the former a three-piece with tub, the latter a two-piece. The master has a full walk-in closet and a front-facing balcony, accessible through sliding glass doors. The central bath has the tub and toilet separated from the vanity via convenient pocket door.

Overall an attractive package in high style, the practical conveniences and luxuries of which are guaranteed to provide the larger family with an outstanding degree of liveability for many years to come.

Plans for design No. 78-2532 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4 per cent sales tax.

Canadian superstar Toller Cranston

Toller Cranston on and off ice

Canadian Olympic medal-winner Toller Cranston is a bit of a ham; this is evident when the top-notch ice skater is performing. Yet, Toller Cranston also has a creative side that he can only express as a painter.

In Toronto recently to tape an appearance on CTV's "Stars on Ice" (on which he will be a recurring guest star during the upcoming season), Cranston assessed himself by reflecting on his dual careers.

"I'm a split personality," he said. "It's essential for me to paint and skate at the same time. I wouldn't do just one of those things. I'll paint for a month at one time and, all of a sudden, I'll have a very big need to express myself physically. I'm really quite content with those two things."

Cranston has just completed a three-month Paris performance of "Holiday on Ice," and he's currently headlining a 10-week ice show in Tokyo. He will then tour Germany before returning to North America to star in this fall's Ice Capades.

Meawhile, his painting exhibitions have been as successful as his skating endeavors. His latest displays in Germany and Toronto sold well, and he is in the enviable position of selling his works faster than he can produce them.

As might be expected, these projects leave Cranston very little time for anything else. As he pointed out, "On my days off in Paris, I didn't spend them whizzing around and eating at Maxim's. I was unconscious in bed."

As the principal skater in the shows, Cranston performed to his maximum capacity. On Saturdays, he skated in four numbers during each of the three performances. He feels that he is in demand as a skater because of his realistic approach to the medium.

"There are, without question, skaters who can do many things I cannot do," explains Cranston, "but I don't think that's the answer. Entertainment doesn't stop at technique. The magic of an entertainer (or ice skater) actually has very little to do with his technique. It's how he puts himself across (to an audience). In the show in Tokyo — which is a huge market — they have to put in someone who is going to pull people into that building and entertain them. It's a matter of supply and demand."

In his dealings with the press, it is inevitable that Cranston will say something controversial. Whether it's about art critics, amateur sports, people or Canada, the skating superstar usually reveals an inherent honesty.

"I enjoy the limelight," he admits. "One finds that the limelight as it exists though, is in the eye of the spectator and is not a reality. I mean, there IS no glamor to my life! So why do I do it? If you get paid well for what you do, you don't mind working, but you can become like a hamster in a cage running around in that wheel. Running and running. You don't really get anywhere, but it's such a daily routine that you have to keep it up."

Cranston continues, "Two days later (when a show finishes), I'm thinking that maybe I should be getting on the ice again. Immediately, you start to prepare for another one of those things. You hate doing it; you're tired. It's unbelievable — you're exhausted all the time and you wake up tired. Then, when it stops, you want it back again. It's a strange life, but I'm telling you the waa it is. I'm NOT telling you that I don't want to do it or that I don't like it. Otherwise, I wouldn't do it."

An individual's need to perform has been said to derive from a desire for mass admiration or an inner, egomaniacal drive. Whatever Toller Cranston's reasons, he is not content to watch. As he says, "I couldn't possibly exist as a spectator. It just isn't in my chemistry."

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

Bartholomew Bandy's at it again. The intrepid World War One flying ace, star of a million mishaps and Volumes I, II and III of Donald Jack's The Bandy Papers, is back, in Volume IV. Titled Me Bandy, You Cissie, Volume IV takes up the saga on board a Cunard liner in mid-Atlantic, when a "poor crimson beanpole of a girl" trips a steward and causes her table's roast duck dinner to catapult into some ornamental shrubbery, where it rests contentedly on a branch.

For Bandy, it's practically love at first sight. (With Cissie, not the duck.) The beanpole has huge black eyes, dark-chocolate hair and a diffident expression brought on by an overbearing upbringing. It's 1920 and peacetime, but between Bandy and Cissie's father, it's soon all-out war.

Cyrus Chaffington is a rich, obnoxious newspaper magnate whose dislike of Bandy is based on his suspicion that he's a fortune hunter and his conviction that it was Bandy who tried to blow him up with a bomb. (Actually, Bandy only delivered the bomb. Inadvertently, of course.)

Me Bandy, You Cissie is entertaining and diverting, but it lacks some of the impact of Three Cheers for Me and its other successors. Jack's depictions of trench and aerial warfare in Volumes I to III were powerful stuff. They were also effective foils for his moments of high (and low) comedy. Nothing in Volume IV can match them for drama, except the aforementioned looping the loop and the scene where Bandy makes his first flight in his newly-assembled Vimy. (He crash lands in the middle of an epic movie.)

But Bandy fans will relish this book nevertheless. It explains, in flashback, how Bandy was freed from his Russian jail as a goodwill gesture to the West. ("When I saw where they were taking me, I was badly shaken . . . My God, was there to be no end to my sufferings? They were putting me up at a Russian hotel.") It continues the brief but devastating biography of his parents. ("Father had been eking out a living by writing sermons for other ministers — Holy ghost-writing, I guess you'd call it.") It contains the by-now familiar sprinkling of famous personages from real life (Arthur Meighen, Dorothy Parker, Trotsky), and it captures the buoyant mood of Roaring Twenties New York.

Jack's treatment of his paradoxical hero is as affectionate as ever. This in itself is a tribute to Bandy's durability over the years. (The original edition of Three Cheers for Me first appeared in 1962.) In fact, one suspects that it's mainly his skill with characterization that has made Jack's books sought after by a devoted following.

Volume IV differs from the earlier books in that two of its three main characters are women. Jack's handling of Cissie — all shy vulnerability and repressed talent — and Dasha — all worldly allure and calculating self-interest — should put to rest forever the suspicion that he "killed off" Katherine in Volume III because he was uncomfortable with a major female character.

The combination of careful research, eye-witness history, aeronautical derring-do and intelligent characterization would make The Bandy Papers successful fiction if no one in them ever cracked a joke. It's a formula that's likely to last Donald Jack a long while yet.

When will they learn?

By WALTER YOUNG

J. B. Priestley suggested that people who want to write about a country not their own should spend either six days or six months there. William Redmond Duggan spent 30 years in Canada as an American foreign service officer. He makes nonsense of Priestley's assertion by writing a book that displays an ignorance and lack of understanding that is both remarkable and frightening.

It is remarkable that after so much time a man whose job, presumably, was to understand the nation in which he was serving, should exhibit the naivete and confusion with which this book abounds. It is frightening that his superiors would have based their perceptions of Canada and, accordingly, their policy on advice from someone who clearly did not grasp the difference between the two countries.

Americans have always had difficulty understanding the relationship of the monarchy to our system of government. One would, nevertheless, expect that a diplomat would be able to grasp the nuances of the structure after 30 years. Not so for Mr. Duggan. The whole thing looks to him like constitutional monarchy but somehow that won't do because it can't really be democratic. So he hastens to tell his readers that Canada is saved from that fate because the powers of the Crown are "brought to bear only upon the advice of the Canadian Parliament . . ." It escaped him that what he described is constitutional monarchy and that Canada is, in fact, a constitutional monarchy.

Apart from the plenitude of errors: e.g. the CCF "emanated from Manitoba" or the native Indian population in B.C. is "concentrated on the Queen Charlotte Islands, in the Vancouver metropolitan area and in the eastern part of the province," the book is flawed by its author's inability to escape his own cultural perspective. He views Canada as a kind of U.S. manque. In part this may be due to his writing the book for his fellow Americans. It seems more likely, however, that he was simply unable to detach himself sufficiently. In other words, he is no de Tocqueville.

We are told, for example, that ours is a country with few national heroes. We have no statesmen venerated as Lincoln is venerated; no military leaders as respected as George Marshall, Dwight Eisenhower, Robert E. Lee and Andrew Jackson. To help us out, Duggan provides seven of his own choice: Macdonald, Laurier, King, St. Laurent, Diefenbaker, Pearson and Trudeau. (That's hard cheese for Borden, Bennett, and Meighen, but the line has to be drawn somewhere). Duggan does not reflect on this lacunae in our national character as indicative of some significant North American difference between ourselves and them. We are not unique, just slow to find out who our heroes are, and who better to help than an American?

Under the heading of entertainment and the arts, Canada is explained largely in terms of those stars who have made it in Hollywood and consequently provide proof of Canada's real greatness. Everyone in the U.S. will remember Norma Shearer, Mary Pickford, Alexis Smith and, of course, Lorne Greene. Well folks, they were born in Canada. And it was a Canadian who invented basketball, and a Canadian horse that won the Kentucky Derby in 1964. Canada must be alright if it can make up games like that and produce horses like Northern Dancer.

It would be pointless to provide a catalogue of similar shallow patches. This book will provide little enlightenment for any readers it might attract in the U.S. There is no point at all in any Canadian buying it.

Duggan's problem is one that has dogged Canadian-American relations for years and it stems from the inability of so many professional American Canada-watchers to view Canada as different in any significant respects from the United States. We are seen as essentially American except that we have less of X and more of Y. It is an understandable error in the uninitiated; in a diplomat of three decades' experience it is little short of astonishing.

It is perhaps less surprising then to note that three American academics praise this book unreservedly on the back cover. They too suffer from the same intellectual astigmatism. The impatience many American leaders have displayed in dealing with Canada undoubtedly was a product of many factors; a major one would be the ignorance fostered by apparent similarity. Duggan's book is an example of that ignorance. We deserve better.

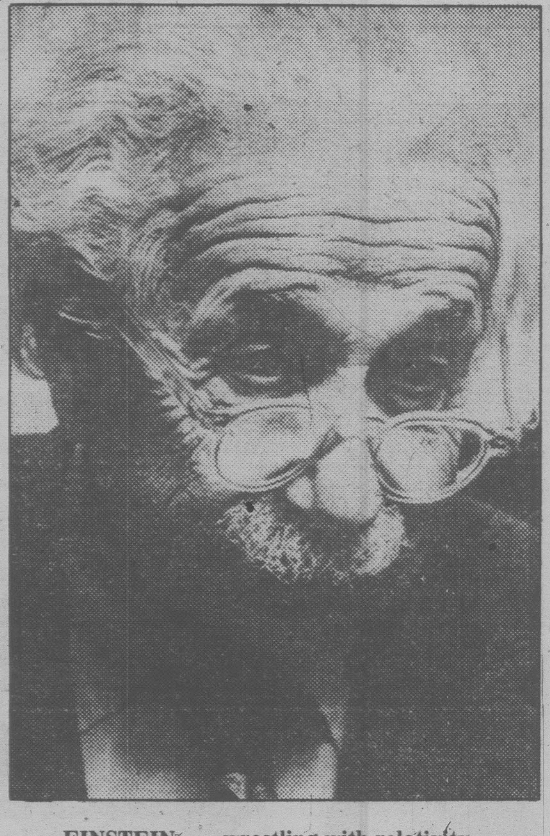
An exciting intellectual adventure

CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT



EINSTEIN . . . wrestling with relativity

This year, to celebrate the centennial of Albert Einstein's birth, I performed my periodic wrestling match with the theories of Relativity, and as usual lost. As usual too, succor was rushed to me by the good-hearted, well-meaning, and more intelligent than I, mostly in the form of pages of mathematical formulae and advice to go back to read Einstein himself. But one piece of advice that did not accost me — it merely rested on the bookshelf — is Gary Zukav's The Dancing Wu Li Masters: An Overview of the New Physics, a book that manages to explain Relativity and a lot more without resorting to a single bit of mathematics (except for asking you to grasp the not-too-onerous concept that the velocity of light, a constant 186,000 miles-per-second, is a product of its frequency and wavelength). After all, Zukav writes, "The fact is that physics is not mathematics. Physics, in essence, is simple wonder at the way things are and a divine (some call it compulsive) interest in how that is so. Mathematics is the tool of physics; stripped of mathematics, physics becomes pure enchantment."

It may not have been so much the drama of Zukav's presentation of the new physics that enchanted me, as the simple fact of my finally understanding Quantum Mechanics, Max Planck's Constant, Werner Heisenberg's Uncertainty Principle, what they mean by the half-life of radioactive substances and why they resort to such a scale, the wave-particle duality of light, the Everett-Wheeler-Graham "Many Worlds Interpretation of Quantum Mechanics," the use of Erwin Schrodinger's wave equation, the Michelson-Morley experiment with light and the Lorentz Transformations, Einstein's Special and General Theories of Relativity, why the orbit of the earth around the sun is the path of least resistance through the space-time continuum and so forth down to high-energy particle physics and its present branching into S-Matric Theory on the one hand, and the search for quarks on the other.

At least I think I understand (which is all that matters for the time being). And that is because of Zukav's extraordinary skill at description and organization. He's one of those rare-gifted teachers who makes you feel as if you're ahead of the lesson, jumping happily to conclusions he hasn't yet seen (though of course he has). And when he does arrive at those conclusions, he often states them in the words of their original discoverers, which suddenly seem as simple as "Pat the Bunny" and flatter you into thinking you could have understood them in their original context on your own.

Flatters his readers

Still, for all my enchantment at just understanding, the drama built into Zukav's presentation is considerable. It begins with his introduction of an Oriental dimension. The Chinese word for physics, Wu Li, also means, depending upon how it is pronounced, "Patterns of Organic Energy," "My Way," "Nonsense," "I Clutch My Ideas," and "Enlightenment." These six meanings not only become the title of the book's six sections — for instance, "Nonsense" is the heading of the one on Einstein's ideas, which is divided into chapters called "Beginner's Mind," "Special Nonsense," and "General Nonsense" — they also serve to shape the leitmotif of Zukav's discussion which relates modern physics to Oriental religion.

But as Zukav himself emphasizes, this is a drama about quantum physics and relativity, not physics and Eastern philosophies (though admittedly he plans to write such a book some day). And the core of the drama lies in a mystery of sub atomic-particle behavior — namely, how two particles that are separated in space and moving apart at the speed of light seem to know instantaneously what each other is doing (this is puzzling because "almost all physics rests upon the assumption that nothing in the universe can travel faster than the speed of light."

Universe inter-connected

This puzzle comes up again and again in some of the landmark experiments of quantum physics, and it serves incidentally to help us understand several key ideas in the book, such as the behavior of light. But the payoff lies in the concluding chapter of the book, in the solution to this mystery proposed in 1964 by a Swiss physicist named J. S. Bell. According to Bell's theorem, as Zukav puts it, "all the parts" of the universe are connected in an intimate and immediate way previously claimed only by mystics and other scientifically objectionable people . . . Bell's theorem is the most profound discovery of science."

Now I don't know how seriously contemporary physicists take the staggering implications of Bell's theorem, one of which is that there may be "superluminal connections" between apparently "separate parts" of reality. According to one of Zukav's footnotes, which were prepared by five experts he consulted, most physicists simply rest with Niels Bohr's conclusion that even though Quantum Mechanics "works," it is not a model of reality and that models of reality are not scientifically useful to pursue.

But for me these implications constitute the climax of the most exciting intellectual adventure I've been on since reading Robert Pirsig's Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance. I don't care how dumb you are at science; you'll come away from this book feeling like Wu Li Master yourself. And even if the feeling is a mere intoxication, you'll be better off for it.

Two powerful Latin novels

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Mario Vargas Llosa's tale, first published in English in 1966, is set in a military academy for teen-aged boys. Using the technique of multiple viewpoints, Vargas Llosa ensnares us in the claustrophobic reality of the academy — and, it may be supposed, in the wider reality of the culture that surrounds it.

And death, of course, there is in this novel, and one in particular, that of the boy the others called th Slave. Everyone's prey, the Slave finally retaliates and is killed, but not before touching more than one life with his pathetic eloquence. The investigation that follows his death, and the end result of that investigation, will be all too familiar (if only by rumor and implication) to everyone, whether or not they've ever lived in a military academy.

Thus The Time of the Hero is a tale of despair — tense, overwrought despair that can find, ultimately, no positive path for its working. Vargas Llosa's prose is as tense as that despair. Once entered it will hold its reader without mercy until its end.

But is there ever an end?

Probably not, the frustrated revolutionaries of Explosion In A Cathedral would mutter — carefully, so the agents of the guillotine wouldn't hear them.

After all the excitement of taking the Bastille and of executing thousands of people, of all the rhetoric that flowed from Paris to the colonies, the Spanish supporters of the struggle in the Caribbean found themselves in a curious position:

". . .an acquired velocity and momentum still kept many men working in a world very different from the one they had wanted to forge," Alejo Carpentier writes; "they were disillusioned and embittered, but . . . incapable of not performing their appointed daily task properly."

The main historical figure upon which this novel is based is one Victor Hugues, a baker's son born in Marseilles who ended up in the Caribbean and led French and Spanish revolutionary forces for some 20 years through all the vicissitudes of the Jacobins, the Directorate and the rise of Napoleon.

In his afterword to the novel, Alejo Carpentier points out that much of what he writes about Hugues and his activities is based on documents he consulted in Guadeloupe and Barbados, as well as what other Latin American writers who "have mentioned Victor Hugues in passing."

As fascinating as Hugues is, however, it is another character here who will probably hold most readers' interest.

That is Esteban, orphan cousin of a rich Havana merchant's children who is swept up in the revolutionary fire to Europe and then to the Caribbean again.

Ironically, though it is through Hugues and the revolution that Esteban is released from both his crippling asthma and his parochialism, he ends up suffering from a more profound malady:

"During these last years Esteban had witnessed the development within himself of a critical propensity — annoying at times, inasmuch as it deprived him of the pleasures of certain spontaneous enthusiasms, shared by the majority — which refused to allow itself to be guided by any general criterion.

Esteban, in short, is an outsider, and his path will be of interest to anyone who shares his stance.

As a Cuban, Alejo Carpentier has, of course, his own experience of revolution — but Explosion In A Cathedral was actually written before the Cuban revolution, and was the fruit of Carpentier's long residence in France.

One can't help relating the work, though, to contemporary events in Cuba, and the more one reads the stronger that uncanny comparison becomes.

Thus the reality of which Carpentier writes possesses depths that history itself — or Time, that is — insists on keeping to the fore. And in this conversation between Victor Hugues and the mysterious Doctor Oge may be heard the prime dichotomy that confronts anyone involved in social change:

" 'What we claim to do,' said Oge angrily, 'is to release the transcendental powers dormant in man.'

And many chains have been snapped — in France, Cuba and countless other battlegrounds. But chains have a curious property that people seem reluctant to look at: they seem to reforge themselves. Seems to, that is: Explosion In A Cathedral is a powerful examination of just how the process is accomplished. And mysticism has a very minor role in the matter.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

'Beautifully written, haunting, it has to be the novel of the year'

The history of Ireland is boring in the extreme because it is so involved and so repetitive. But the historian's bane is the novelist's blessing, for one has only to focus on a single incident, and simplify and magnify it, and one has the history of Ireland over the past 300 years, and even longer, encapsulated.

Run-of-the-mill novels set in Ireland are plentiful, and few if any of them are worth reading. To produce a really great novel about Ireland demands unusual requirements. One must be well versed in political, military, economic and social history, which is to say one must fully comprehend oppression, fear, misery, opportunism, pride, prejudice, fanaticism, hope, despair, love, hatred, bigotry and visionariness — and always in the extreme. And, most difficult of all, the novelist must be — or at least seem to be — completely unbiased.

Now, that's a tall order and there are few contemporary novelists who can measure up to such sterm standards. In fact, when applied to Ireland, it is such a tall order that only someone who has perhaps only one novel in him would accept the challenge. Such a one exists in the person of Thomas Flanagan, the distinguished 56-year-old professor of English at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, who over the past 20 years has spent much of his time in Ireland.

Flanagan has set his novel in the Ireland of 1798, the year when a band of determined, romantic Irishmen rise up against their English rulers. The French, having been successful in their own revolution, decide to aid the Irish, more to harass the English than for any idealistic reason. The arrival of three shiploads of French troops in county Mayo is the signal for the commencement of the war of liberation.

Glorious summer weather and the initial flurry of surprise attacks and easy victories make it appear as if the dream of a free Ireland will be realized. But by fall, denied French reinforcements and confronted by vastly superior forces under Lord Cornwallis (who is still smarting under his defeat in America by Washington), the Irish are doomed. The uprising, marked by heroism and brutality, ends in bloody disaster, a nightmarish sequence in a continuing dream. The quelling of the Irish rebellion passes virtually unnoticed in an England then celebrating Nelson's great victory over the French fleet at Aboukir.

Out of this minor historical episode, which goes into Irish folklore as The Year of the French (which is the title of the book), Flanagan has succeeded in forging a splendid narrative of epic proportions.

The story is told by five narrators: a Protestant clergyman trapped in rebel-held territory; an observant but non-participating Irish schoolteacher; a solicitor and rebel leader and his wife; and by a young aide to the English commander-in-chief. The story is passed back and forth between them like a musical theme, each one accurately describing a particualar event from a particular vantage point, each one advancing the dramatic narrative to its agonizing and inexorable conclusion.

The device creates constant movement as we follow the fortunes of scores of characters brought vividly to life against a background of intrigue and foolhardiness pitted against a relentless authority; and discipled soldiers against a amorphous mass of faceless illiterate, impoverished, befuddled peasants.

By skipping the 'dull' parts, The Year of the French can be read, and read fairly rapidly, simply as a rattling good story, but any reader foolish enough to do so will be cheating himself, for this book — all 516 pages of it — must be read carefully and thoughtfully in order to appreciate fully the author's uncommon skill.

Flanagan has taken infinite pains to evoke the total climate of the period. His characters range from aristocrats and intellectuals through politicians, professional men and farmers to hedgerow schoolteachers, tavern-keepers, itinerant poets and rude peasants. Architecture, dress, manners, attitudes and, above all, speech patterns, are used to delineate the various strata of society. There is nothing unusual about this, of course, except that Flanagan does it all so beautifully and subtly and without recourse to dialect.

But most impressive of all is the manner of which, through dialogue and description, he shows his profound understanding of the Irish, a lovable, volatile, disturbing people who have never known what they want but have always known what they hate. A country where vengeance can be a career and where century after century, generation after generation receives hatred with mothers' milk, a hatred that distracts from seeking rational solutions to problems. I have never read a novel about Ireland in which this point is so well made, and so sympathetically handled, as it is in The Year of the French.

We see the Ireland of 1798 where Protestant landlords despised their tenants, the illiterate and wretchedly-poor Catholic peasants, who in turn hated the Protestants for holding land they believed was rightfully theirs, the land having been given to the ancestors of the Protestants — non-commissioned officers in the English army — as a reward by the conquering Cromwell.

Things were further complicated by the hatred displayed by Anglo-Irish farmers for their superior landlords, the absentee aristocrats whose officer ancestors had been richly rewarded by another conqueror, King William. Stewards demanded more from farmers who demanded more from peasants, and the peasants starved. Ireland, rich in agricultural land, was England's granary and was mortgaged to her and was bled white year after year.

The uprising, dramatized in The Year of the French, is a plot devised by a handful of rich Protestants and Catholics, all of them with vested interests, to free the country from England's yoke. They call themselves The Society of United Irishmen and they extract oaths of loyalty from landlords who in turn extract oaths of loyalty from peasants, none of whom knows enough to be able to count his toes.

The rebellion failed, but Protestant and Catholic had fought side by side and their blood had mingled. Theoretically, this should have been enough to destroy old enmities and unite the Irish against a common foe. But none had reckoned with the power of fanatical priests who held complete sway over the wretched peasantry.

The priests were solely interested in religious warfare, and with Catholics suffering far more grievously than Protestants in the rebellion, they had no difficulty in persuading the peasants who the real enemies were. So the ill-fated uprising brought comfort only to England and the Catholic priests of Ireland, which would be a paradox in any land other than Ireland.

The book is set in 1798, but change only the superficialities of dress, manners, titles and terminology, and it could be 1898, or 1928, or any other year, including 1979. Highflown rhetoric, which so moves the Irish, has not altered since it was first remarked upon by the Elizabethan poet Edmund Spencer. "Liberty", "sacred rights of man", and "fervent love of freedom", and other Rousseauistic abstractions, all somehow equated with murderous assaults on those of a different religious persuasion, are as much Irish currency today as they were 200 and more years ago.

So, to me at any rate, The Year of the French is at once a period piece and an allegory, a remarkable achievement for an author whose first novel this is.

Don't read this novel in snatches. If you cannot spare time to read it at a sitting, as I did, at least read it during two or three lengthy sessions. In that way only will you savor to the full the marvellous atmosphere the author has created, from the setting of the scene in Ireland to the inspirational anti-climax in England, which deals artlessly with Malthusian logic and misguided charity.

Beautifully written, haunting, and intensely absorbing, The Year of the French has to be the novel of the year. Thomas Flanagan, I salute you!

'This land can afford only so many of us'

By ELAINE KENDALL

To call this extraordinary work a novel is somewhat like calling the Sistine ceiling a picture. The familiar word in no way prepares the reader for the impact and intensity of the experience ahead, from a book that at first eludes and then transcends all the usual categories.

Stratis Haviaras is a 44-year-old Greek-American poet who has been writing in English for six years. On its first level, When the Tree Sings is a narrative of early adolescence set in a piercingly poor Greek village. It begins during the German occupation, continues through the Allied liberation and ends when the author must leave his home forever.

" 'This land, a narrow strip between rocks and seas, can afford only so many of us. It has no trees, no water — only the illusion of trees and water,' Grandfather said. 'Even when our crops and livestock were not being taken away, nor our springs filled with corpses and muck, a dozen or so young men and women of your age would gather once a year, first on the Promontory, then in the bay to wait for the ship, while parents and other relatives consoled themselves by saying, "They'll make a fortune in exile, and they'll come back one day." No one ever returned. The ship came back empty, came back for more,' Grandfather said. 'This land can afford only so many of us; the rest will have to go . . . One way or another,' he said."

That poignant and fatalistic paragraph appears at the beginning and end of the book. More than a hundred such pieces, equally self-contained, advance the story. Though these brief segments are connected by time and place and are told in the maturing voice of the first-person narrator, they differ widely from one another. Some seem to be fables, parables or myths, others are little comedies, many are brutal; all are stark and deceptively simple. In form, they are neither chapters nor stanzas, but something between the two; as spare as verse but as straightforward as good journalism.

The psychotic cruelty of the Germans finally gives way to the fumbling chaos of the Allies, and a few dozen villagers live to see the changes and accommodate to them. That particular war is over. Those mountain fighters who survive come back to the town and take up their interrupted trades. The young narrator watches, dreams, suffers and finally goes away.

" 'It's the bones that grow first,' said Grandmother. 'The bones stretching the skin. So if your clothes don't fit anymore, we'll just have to tear them a little, here and there,' she said, 'right where the skin cracks - the skin being your first layer of clothing.' "

Haviaras has imposed the poet's strict discipline upon history, fantasy, philosophy and satire. He has distilled a violent decade to its barest elements, as if he were trying to create a pure elixir of fiction from all the material at hand, and he succeeds completely. When the Tree Sings is an essential book in the most literal sense, so concentrated that it's almost impossible to read — to withstand — at a single sitting.

People who have difficulty comprehending the enormity of the Holocaust in Europe will have no such problem in absorbing exactly what happened in Haviaras' village. There the evil was dreadfully manageable and excruciatingly personal. There are no abstract multitudes in this book, no vast panoramas of war. By reducing the scale of the agony, Haviaras enlarges and deepens our involvement, turning his town into a lasting metaphor like Guernica, Lidice, or My Lai.

Though many of the incidents in this book are scarifyingly explicit, When the Tree Sings is often beautiful in the way that absolutes can be beautiful. Haviaras leads the reader through an inexorable emotional ordeal to an eventual celebration of life. That was the ancient Greek literary ideal and it's fully realized in this modern classic.
